PREFACE

These poems have been written under various, and in some cases difficult, conditions: in the open air, "with team afield"; in the student's den, with the ghosts of unfinished lessons hovering gloomily about; amid the rush and roar of railroad travel, which trains of thought are not prone to follow; and in the editor's sanctum, where the dainty feet of the Muses do not always deign to tread.

The author has been asked, by friends in all parts of the country, to put his poems into a more durable form than they have hitherto possessed; and it is in accordance with these requests that he now presents "Farm Ballads" to the public.

PREFACE TO REVISED EDITION

It has been deemed best to revise and enlarge this book, bringing it up in size to other members of the "Farm Series."

The additional numbers are of two classes: poems written some ten years ago, and omitted in former editions, and those written during the past year. The author has not taken pains to distinguish these from each other by inserting dates; he prefers to let each one stand upon its own merits, or stumble against its own demerits, without the advantage or disadvantage of a published birth-year.

He is sorry the whole work is not better, and still rejoices that the public have shown a continuous appetite for the book. He thanks them, and takes courage for future work.

FARM BALLADS

BETSEY AND I ARE OUT

Draw up the papers, lawyer, and make 'em good and stout;
Things at home are crossways, and Betsey and I are out.
We, who have worked together so long as man and wife,
Must pull in single harness the rest of our nat'ral life.

"What is the matter?" say you. I swan it's hard to tell!
Most of the years behind us we've passed by very well;
I have no other woman, she has no other man—
Only we've lived together as long as we ever can.

So I have talked with Betsey, and Betsey has talked with me,
So we've agreed together that we can't never agree;

Not that we've catched each other in any terrible crime;
We've been a-gathering this for years, a little at a time.

There was a stock of temper we both had for a start,
Though we never suspected 'twould take us two apart;
I had my various failings, bred in the flesh and bone;
And Betsey, like all good women, had a temper of her own.

First thing I remember whereon we disagreed
Was something concerning heaven—a difference in our creed;
We arg'ed the thing at breakfast, we arg'ed the thing
at tea,
And the more we arg'ed the question the more we didn't agree.

And the next that I remember was when we lost a cow;
She had kicked the bucket for certain, the question was only—How?
I held my own opinion, and Betsey another had;
And when we were done a-talkin', we both of us was mad.

And the next that I remember, it started in a joke;
But full for a week it lasted, and neither of us spoke.
And the next was when I scolded because she broke a bowl;
And she said I was mean and stingy, and hadn't any soul.

And so that bowl kept pourin' dissensions in our cup;
And so that blamed old cow was always a-comin' up;
And so that heaven we arg'ed no nearer to us got,
But it gave us a taste of somethin' a thousand times as hot.

And so the thing kept workin', and all the self-same way:
Always somethin' to arg'e, and somethin' sharp to say;
And down on us came the neighbors, a couple dozen strong,
And lent their kindest sarvice for to help the thing along.

And there has been days together—and many a weary week—
We was both of us cross and crabbed, and both too proud to speak;
And I have been thinkin' and thinkin', the whole of the winter and fall,
If I can't live kind with a woman, why, then, I won't at all.

And so I have talked with Betsey, and Betsey has talked with me,
And we have agreed together that we can't never agree;
And what is hers shall be hers, and what is mine shall be mine;
And I'll put it in the agreement, and take it to her to sign.

Write on the paper, lawyer—the very first paragraph—
Of all the farm and live-stock that she shall have her half;
For she has helped to earn it, through many a weary day:
And it's nothing more than justice that Betsey has her pay.

Give her the house and homestead: a man can thrive and roam,
But women are skeery critters, unless they have a home;
And I have always determined, and never failed to say,
That my wife never should want a home if I was taken away.

There is a little hard cash that's drawin' tol'rable pay:
Just a few thousand dollars laid by for a rainy day;
Safe in the hands of good men, and easy to get at;
Put in another clause there, and give her half of that.

Yes, I see you smile, Sir, at my givin' her so much;
Yes, divorces is cheap, Sir, but I take no stock in such!
True and fair I married her, when she was blithe and young;
And Betsey was al'ays good to me—exceptin' with her tongue.

Once, when I was young as you, and not so smart, perhaps,
For me she mittened a lawyer, and several other chaps;
And all of them fellers was flustered, and fairly taken down,
And I for a time was counted the luckiest man in town.

Once when I had a fever—I won't forget it soon—
I was hot as a basted turkey and crazy as a loon!
Never an hour went by me when she was out of sight—
She nursed me true and tender, and stuck to me day and night.

And if ever a house was tidy, and ever a kitchen clean,
Her house and kitchen was tidy as any I ever seen;
And I don't complain of Betsey, or any of her acts,
Exceptin' as when we've quarrelled, and twitted each other on facts.

So draw up the papers, lawyer: and I'll go home to-night,
And read the agreement to her, and see if it's all right;
And then, in the mornin', I'll sell to a tradin' man I know,
And kiss the child that was left to us, and out in the world I'll go.

And one thing put in the paper, that first to me didn't occur:
That when I am dead at last she bring me back to her;
And lay me under the maples I planted years ago,
When she and I was happy; before we quarrelled so.

And when she dies I wish that she would be laid by me;
And, lyin' together in silence, perhaps we might agree;
And if ever we meet in heaven, I wouldn't think it queer
If we loved each other the better for what we quarrelled here.

HOW BETSEY AND I MADE UP

Give us your hand, Mr. Lawyer: how do you do today?
You drew up that paper — I s'pose you want your pay.
Don't cut down your figures; make it an X or a V;
For that 'ere written agreement was just the makin'
of me!

Goin' home that evenin' I tell you I was blue,
Thinkin' of all my troubles, and what I was goin'
to do;
And if my hosses hadn't been the steadiest team alive,
They'd 've tipped me over for certain; for I couldn't see where to drive.

No—for I was laborin' under a heavy load;
No—for I was travellin' an entirely different road;
For I was a-tracin' over the path of our lives ag'in,
And observin' where we missed the way, and where we might have been.

And many a corner we'd turned that just to a quarrel led,
When I ought to 've held my temper, and driven straight ahead;
And the more I thought it over the more these memories came,
And the more I struck the opinion that I was the most to blame.

And things I had long forgotten kept risin' in my mind,
Of little matters betwixt us, where Betsey was good and kind;
And these things flashed all through me, as you know things sometimes will
When a feller's alone in the darkness, and everything is still.

"But," says I, "we're too far along to take another track,
And when I put my hand to the plough I do not oft turn back;
And 'tain't an uncommon thing now for couples to smash in two;"
And so I set my teeth together, and vowed I'd see it through.

And when I come in sight o' the house 'twas some'at in the night,
And just as I turned a hill-top I see the kitchen light;

Which often a han'some pictur' to a hungry person makes,
But it don't interest a man so much that's goin' to pull up stakes.

And when I went in the house, the table was set for me—
As good a supper 's ever I saw, or ever want to see;
And I crammed the agreement down in my pocket as well as ever I could,
And fell to eatin' my victuals, which somehow didn't taste 'good.

And Betsey, she pretended to be lookin' all round the house;
But she watched my side coat-pocket like a cat would watch a mouse;
And then she went to foolin' a little with her cup,
And intently readin' a newspaper—a-holdin' it wrong side up.

And when I'd done with my supper, I drawed the agreement out,
And give it to her without a word, for she knowed what 'twas about;
And then I hummed a little tune; but now and then a note
Got bu'sted by some animal that hopped up in my throat.

Then Betsey she went an' took her specs from off the mantel-shelf,
And read the agreement over quite softly to herself;
Read it by little and little; for her eyes is gettin' old,
And lawyers' writin' ain't no print, especially when it's cold.

And after she'd read a little she give my arm a touch,
And kindly said she was afraid I was 'lowin' her too much;
But when she was through she went for me, her face
a-streamin' with tears,
And kissed me for the first time in half-a-dozen years!

I don't know what you'll think, Sir—I didn't come to inquire—
But I picked up that agreement and stuffed it in the fire;
And I told her we'd bury the hatchet alongside of the cow;
And we struck an agreement never to have another row.

And I told her in the future I wouldn't speak cross
nor rash
If half the crockery in the house was broken all to smash;
And she said, in regards to heaven, we'd try and prove its worth
By startin' a branch establishment, and runnin' it here on earth.

"AND KISSED ME FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HALF-A-DOZEN YEARS!"

And so we sat a-talkin' three-quarters of the night,
And opened our hearts to each other until they both grew light;
And the days when I was winnin' her away from so many men
Was nothin' to that evenin' I courted her over again.

Next mornin' an ancient virgin took pains to call on us,
Her lamp all trimmed and a-burnin'—to kindle another fuss;
But when she went to pryin' 'round and openin' up old sores,
My Betsey rose politely, and showed her out-of-doors!

Since then I don't deny but we've had a word or two;
But we've got our eyes wide open now, and know just what to do:
When one speaks cross the other just meets it with a laugh,
And the first one's ready to give up considerable more than half.

So make out your bill, Mr. Lawyer: don't stop short of an X;
Make it more if you want to, for I have got the checks!
I'm richer than a National Bank, with all its treasures told:
For I've got a wife at home now that's worth her weight in gold.

GONE WITH A HANDSOMER MAN

JOHN

I've worked in the field all day, a-ploughin' the "stony streak";
I've scolded my team till I'm hoarse; I've tramped till my legs are weak;
I've choked a dozen swears (so 's not to tell Jane fibs)
When the plough-p'int struck a stone and the handles punched my ribs.

I've put my team in the barn, and rubbed their sweaty coats;
I've fed 'em a heap of hay and half a bushel of oats;
And to see the way they eat makes me like eatin' feel,
And Jane won't say to-night that I don't make out a meal.

Well said! the door is locked! but here she's left the key,
Under the step, in a place known only to her and me;
I wonder who's dyin' or dead, that she's hustled off pell-mell:
But here on the table's a note, and probably this will tell.

Good God! my wife is gone! my wife is gone astray!
The letter it says, "Good-bye, for I'm a-going away;
I've lived with you six months, John, and so far I've been true;
But I'm going away to-day with a handsomer man than you."

A han'somer man than me! Why, that ain't much to say;
There's han'somer men than me go past here every day.
There's han'somer men than me—I ain't of the han'- some kind;
But a lovin'er man than I was I guess she'll never find!

Curse her! curse her! I say, and give my curses wings!
May the words of love I've spoke be changed to scorpion-stings!
Oh, she filled my heart with joy, she emptied my heart
of doubt,
And now, with a scratch of a pen, she lets my heart's blood out!

Curse her! curse her! say I; she'll some time rue this
day;
She'll some time learn that hate is a game that two can play;
And long before she dies she'll grieve she ever was born;
For I'll plough her grave with hate, and seed it down to scorn!

As sure as the world goes on, there'll come a time when she
Will read the devilish heart of that han'somer man than me;
And there'll be a time when he will find, as others do,
That she who is false to one can be the same with two!

And when her face grows pale, and when her eyes grow dim,
And when he is tired of her and she is tired of him,
She'll do what she ought to have done, and coolly count the cost;
And then she'll see things clear, and know what she has lost.

And thoughts that are now asleep will wake up in her mind,
And she will mourn and cry for what she has left behind;
And maybe she'll sometimes long for me — for me — but no!
I've blotted her out of my heart, and I will not have it so!

And yet in her girlish heart there was somethin' or other she had
That fastened a man to her, and wasn't entirely bad;
And she loved me a little, I think, although it didn't last;
But I mustn't think of these things — I've buried 'em in the past.

"CURSE HER! CURSE HER!"

I'll take my hard words back, nor make a bad matter worse;
She'll have trouble enough, poor thing; she shall not have my curse;
But I'll live a life so square — and I well know that I can—
That she will always grieve that she went with that han'somer man.

Ah, here is her kitchen dress! it makes my poor eyes blur;
It seems, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' her.
And here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat,
And yonder's her weddin'-gown: I wonder she didn't take that!

'Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear,"
And said I was makin' for her a regular paradise here:
O God! if you want a man to sense the pains of hell,
Before you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell!

Good-bye — I wish that death had severed us two apart;
You've lost a worshipper here—you've crushed a lovin' heart.
I'll worship no woman again! but I guess I'll learn to pray,
And kneel as you used to kneel before you run away.

And if I thought I could bring my words on heaven
to bear,
And if I thought I had some influence up there,
I would pray that I might be, if it only could be so,
As happy and gay as I was a half an hour ago!

JANE (entering)

Why, John, what a litter here! you've thrown things
all around!
Come, what's the matter now? and what 've you lost or found?
And here's my father here, a-waiting for supper, too;
I've been a-riding with him — he's that "handsomer man than you."

Ha! ha! Pa, take a seat, while I put the kettle on,
And get things ready for tea, and kiss my dear old
John.
Why, John, you look so strange! Come, what has crossed your track?
I was only a-joking, you know; I'm willing to take it back.

JOHN (aside)

Well, now, if this ain't a joke, with rather a bitter cream!
It seems as if I'd woke from a mighty ticklish dream;

"WHY, JOHN, WHAT A LITTER HERE!"

And I think she "smells a rat," for she smiles at me so queer;
I hope she don't; good Lord! I hope that they didn't hear!

'Twas one of her practical drives—why didn't I understand!
I'll never break sod again till I get the lay of the land.
But one thing's settled with me: to appreciate heaven well,
'Tis good for a man to have some fifteen minutes of hell!

JOHNNY RICH

RAISE the light a little, Jim,
For it's getting rather dim,
And, with such a storm a-howlin', 'twill not do to douse the glim;
Hustle down the curtains, Lu;
Poke the fire a little, Su;
This is somethin' of a flurry, mother, somethin' of a—whew!—

Goodness gracious, how it pours!
How it beats ag'in the doors!
You will have a hard one, Jimmy, when you go to do the chores!
Do not overfeed the gray;
Give a plenty to the bay;
And be careful with your lantern when you go among the hay.

See the horses have a bed
When you've got 'em fairly fed;
Feed the cows that's in the stable, and the sheep that's in the shed;

Give the spotted cow some meal,
Where the brindle cannot steal;
For she's greedy as a porker, and as slipp'ry as an eel.

Hang your lantern by the ring,
On a nail, or on a string;
For the Durham calf 'll bunt it, if there's any such a thing:
He's a handsome one to see,
And a knowin' one is he:
I stooped over t'other morning, and he up and went for me:

Rover thinks he hears a noise!
Just keep still a minute, boys;
Nellie, hold your tongue a second, and be silent with your toys.
Stop that barkin', now, you whelp,
Or I'll kick you till you yelp!
Yes, I hear it; 'tis somebody that is callin' out for help.

Get the lantern, Jim and Tom;
Mother, keep the babies calm,
And we'll follow up that halloa, and we'll see where it is from.
'Tis a hairy sort of night
For a man to face and fight;
And the wind is blowin'— Hang it, Jimmy, bring another light!

* * * * * * *

Ah! 'twas you, then, Johnny Rich,
Yelling out at such a pitch,
For a decent man to help you, while you fell into the ditch!
'Tisn't quite the thing to say:
But we ought to've let you lay,
While your drunken carcass died a-drinkin' water, anyway!

And to see you on my floor,
And to hear the way you snore,
Now we've lugged you under shelter, and the danger all is o'er;
And you lie there, quite resigned,
Whiskey deaf, and whiskey blind,
And it will not hurt your feelin's, so I guess I'll free my mind.

Do you mind, you thievin' dunce,
How you robbed my orchard once,
Takin' all the biggest apples, leavin' all the littlest runts?
Do you mind my melon-patch—
How you gobbled the whole batch,
Stacked the vines, and sliced the greenest melons, just to raise the scratch?

Do you think, you drunken wag,
It was anything to brag,
To be cornered in my hen-roost, with two pullets in a bag?

"'TIS A HAIRY SORT OF NIGHT FOR A MAN TO FACE AND FIGHT"

You are used to dirty dens;
You have often slept in pens;
I've a mind to take you out there now, and roost you with the hens!

Do you call to mind with me
How, one night, you and your three
Took my wagon all to pieces for to hang it on a tree?
How you hung it up, you eels,
Straight and steady, by the wheels?
I've a mind to take you out there now, and hang you by your heels!

How, the Fourth of last July,
When you got a little high,
You went back of Wilson's counter when you thought he wasn't nigh?
How he heard some specie chink,
And was on you in a wink,
And you promised if he'd hush it that you never more would drink?

Do you mind our temperance hall?
How you're always sure to call,
And recount your reformation with the biggest speech of all?
How you talk, and how you sing,
That the pledge is just the thing—
How you sign it every winter, and then smash it every spring?

Do you mind how Jennie Green
Was as happy as a queen,
When you walked with her one Sunday, looking sober, straight, and clean?
How she cried out half her sight,
When you staggered by, next night,
With a shade across your peepers, that you'd picked up in a fight?

How our hearts with pleasure warmed
When your mother, though it stormed,
Run up here one day to tell us that you truly had reformed?
How that very self-same day,
When upon her homeward way,
She ran on you, where you'd hidden, full three-quarters o'er the bay?

Oh, you little whiskey-keg!
Oh, you horrid little egg!
You're a-goin' to destruction with your swiftest foot and leg!
I've a mind to take you out
Underneath the water-spout,
Just to rinse you up a little, so you'll know what you're about!

But you've got a handsome eye;
And, although I can't tell why,
Somethin' somewhere in you always lets you get another try:

So, for all that I have said,
I'll not douse you; but, instead,
I will strip you, I will rub you, I will put you into bed!

OUT OF THE OLD HOUSE

Out of the old house, Nancy — moved up into the new;
All the hurry and worry is just as good as through!
Only a bounden duty remains for you and I—
And that's to stand on the door-step, here, and bid the old house good-bye.

What a shell we've lived in, these nineteen or twenty years!
Wonder it hadn't smashed in, and tumbled about our ears;
Wonder it's stuck together, and answered till to-day;
But every individual log was put up here to stay.

Things looked rather new, though, when this old house was built;
And things that blossomed you, though, would 've made some women wilt;
And every other day, then, as sure as day would break,
My neighbor Ager come this way, invitin' me to "shake."

And you, for want of neighbors, was sometimes blue and sad,
For wolves and bears and wild-cats was the nearest ones you had;
But lookin' ahead to the clearin', we worked with all our might,
Until we was fairly out of the woods, and things was goin' right.

Look up there at our new house!—ain't it a thing to see?
Tall and big and handsome, and new as new can be;
All in apple-pie order, especially the shelves,
And never a debt to say but what we own it all ourselves.

Look at our old log-house — how little it now appears!
But it's never gone back on us for nineteen or twenty years;
An' I won't go back on it now, or go to pokin' fun:
There's such a thing as praisin' a thing for the good that it has done.

Probably you remember how rich we was that night,
When we was fairly settled, an' had things snug and right:
We feel as proud as you please, Nancy, over our house
that's new,
But we felt as proud under this old roof, and a good deal prouder, too.

Never a handsomer house was seen beneath the sun:
Kitchen and parlor and bedroom—we had 'em—all in one;
And the fat old wooden clock that we brought when we came West,
Was tickin' away in the corner there, and doin' its level best.

Trees was all around us, a-whisperin' cheering words;
Loud was the squirrel's chatter, and sweet the songs of birds;
And home grew sweeter and brighter — our courage began to mount—
And things looked hearty and happy then, and work appeared to count.

And here one night it happened, when things was goin' bad,
We fell in a deep old quarrel—the first we ever had;
And when you give out and cried, then I, like a fool, give in;
And then we agreed to rub all out, and start out life ag'in.

Here it was, you remember, we sat when the day was done,
And you was a-makin' clothing that wasn't for either one;
And often a soft word of love I was soft enough to say,
And the wolves was howlin' in the woods not twenty rods away.

"SETTLERS CAME TO SEE THAT SHOW"

Then our first-born baby—a regular little joy—
Though I fretted a little because it wasn't a boy:
Wa'n't she a little flirt, though, with all her pouts and smiles?
Why, settlers came to see that show a half a dozen miles.

Yonder sat the cradle—a homely, home-made thing,
And many a night I rocked it, providin' you would sing;
And many a little stranger brought up with us to stay—
And so that cradle, for many a year, was never put away.

How they kept a-comin', so cunnin' and fat and small!
How they growed! 'twas a wonder how we found room for 'em all;
But though the house was crowded, it empty seemed that day
When Jennie lay by the fireplace, there, and moaned her life away.

Right in there the preacher, with Bible and hymn-book, stood,
"'Twixt the dead and the living," and "hoped 'twould do us good;"
And the little white-wood coffin on the table there was set,
And now as I rub my eyes it seems as if I could see it yet.

And then that fit of sickness it brought on you, you know:
Just by a thread you hung, and you e'en-a'most let go;
And here is the spot I tumbled, an' give the Lord his due,
When the doctor said the fever'd turned, an' he could fetch you through.

Yes, a deal has happened to make this old house dear:
Christenin's, funerals, weddin's — what haven't we had here?
Not a log in this buildin' but its memories has got,
And not a nail in this old floor but touches a tender spot.

Out of the old house, Nancy — moved up into the new;
All the hurry and worry is just as good as through;
But I tell you a thing right here, that I ain't ashamed to say:
There's precious things in this old house we never can take away.

Here the old house will stand, but not as it stood before:
Winds will whistle through it, and rains will flood the floor;
And over the hearth, once blazing, the snow-drifts oft will pile,
And the old thing will seem to be a-mournin' all the while.

Fare you well, old house! you're naught that can feel or see,
But you seem like a human being—a dear old friend
to me;
And we never will have a better home, if my opinion stands,
Until we commence a-keepin' house in the house not made with hands.

OVER THE HILL TO THE POOR-HOUSE

Over the hill to the poor-house I'm trudgin' my weary way—
I, a woman of seventy, and only a trifle gray—
I, who am smart an' chipper, for all the years I've told,
As many another woman that's only half as old.

Over the hill to the poor-house — I can't quite make it clear!
Over the hill to the poor-house — it seems so horrid
queer!
Many a step I've taken, a-toilin' to and fro,
But this is a sort of journey I never thought to go.

What is the use of heapin' on me a pauper's shame?
Am I lazy or crazy? am I blind or lame?
True, I am not so supple, nor yet so awful stout;
But charity ain't no favor, if one can live without.

I am ready and willin' an' anxious any day
To work for a decent livin', an' pay my honest way;
For I can earn my victuals, an' more too, I'll be bound,
If anybody is willin' to only have me round.

Once I was young an' han'some — I was, upon my soul—
Once my cheeks was roses, my eyes as black as coal,
And I can't remember, in them days, of hearin' people say,
For any kind of a reason, that I was in their way!

'Tain't no use of boastin', or talkin' over free,
But many a house an' home was open then to me;
Many a han'some offer I had from likely men,
And nobody ever hinted that I was a burden then!

And when to John I was married, sure he was good and smart,
But he and all the neighbors would own I done my part;
For life was all before me, an' I was young an' strong,
And I worked my best an' smartest in tryin' to get along.

And so we worked together: and life was hard, but gay,
With now and then a baby to cheer us on our way;
Till we had half a dozen: an' all growed clean an' neat,
An' went to school like others, an' had enough to eat.

An' so we worked for the child'rn, and raised 'em every one;
Worked for 'em summer and winter, just as we ought to 've done;

Only perhaps we humored 'em, which some good folks condemn;
But every couple's own child'rn's a heap the dearest to them!

Strange how much we think of our blesséd little ones!—
I'd have died for my daughters, I'd have died for my sons;
And God he made that rule of love; but when we're old and gray,
I've noticed it sometimes somehow fails to work the other way.

Strange, another thing: when our boys an' girls was grown,
And when, exceptin' Charley, they'd left us there alone;
When John he nearer an' nearer came, an' dearer seemed to be,
The Lord—of Hosts!—He came one day an' took him away from me!

Still I was bound to struggle, an' never to cringe or fall—
Still I worked for Charley, for Charley was now my all;
And Charley was pretty good to me, with scarce a word or frown,
Till at last he went a-courtin', and brought a wife from town.

"TILL AT LAST HE WENT A-COURTIN'"

She was somewhat dressy, an' hadn't a pleasant smile—
She was quite conceity, and carried a heap o' style;
But if ever I tried to be friends, I did with her, I know;
But she was hard and haughty, an' we couldn't make it go.

She had an edication, an' that was good for her;
But when she twitted me on mine, 'twas carryin' things too fur;
An' I told her once, 'fore company (an' it almost made her sick),
That I never swallowed a grammar, or 'et a 'rithmetic.

So 'twas only a few days before the thing was done—
They was a family of themselves, and I another one;
And a very little cottage one family will do,
But I never have seen a mansion that was big enough for two.

An' I never could speak to suit her, never could please her eye,
An' it made me independent, an' then I didn't try;
But I was terribly humbled, an' felt it like a blow,
When Charley turned ag'in me, an' told me I could go!

I went to live with Susan: but Susan's house was small,
And she was always a-hintin' how snug it was for us all;
And what with her husband's sisters, and what with child'rn three,
'Twas easy to discover there wasn't room for me.

An' then I went with Thomas, the oldest son I've got:
For Thomas's buildings 'd cover the half of an acre lot;
But all the child'rn was on me—I couldn't stand their sauce—
And Thomas said I needn't think I was comin' there to boss.

An' then I wrote to Rebecca, my girl who lives out West,
And to Isaac, not far from her—some twenty miles at best;
And one of 'em said 'twas too warm there for any one so old,
And t'other had an opinion the climate was too cold.

So they have shirked and slighted me, an' shifted me about—
So they have wellnigh soured me, an' wore my old heart out;
But still I've borne up pretty well, an' wasn't much put down,
Till Charley went to the poor-master, an' put me on the town!

Over the hill to the poor-house — my child'rn dear, good-by!
Many a night I've watched you when only God was nigh;
And God 'll judge between us; but I will al'ays pray
That you shall never suffer the half I do to-day!

OVER THE HILL FROM THE POOR-HOUSE

OVER the hill to the poor-house I went, one winter's day:
I—who was always considered a "bad stick" anyway;
I—who was always gettin' in a large assortment of tricks,
And always sure to be quoted as "the worst of the Deacon's six."

Tom was a steady fellow, and saved up all he got;
But when it came to payin' his debts, he'd always rather not;
And Isaac could quote the Scriptures, an' never forgot nor slipped;
But "Honor thy father and mother" was one of the verses he skipped.

An' as for Susan an' 'Becca, their hearts, as one might say,
Was good—what there was of 'em—which wasn't much, anyway;
And all of our little family was good as you'll often see,
Exceptin' one poor fellow—and that 'ere one was me.

All of the rest was steady, an' nice, an' good, an' right;
All of the rest was sober—but I was mainly tight;
An' when I "borrowed" two horses, or helped to, just for fun—
If I hadn't been drunk as blazes, it never would have been done.

But when they sent me to prison, the hardest grief I felt
Was when my poor old mother beside me feebly knelt,
And cried and prayed all round me, till I got melted down,
And cried as I wouldn't have cried that day for half the horses in town.

And with my left arm round her—my right hand lifted high—
I swore henceforth to be honest, and sober live and die;
And I went and served my term out, although 'twas a bitter pill,
Which many fellows ought to take who probably never will.

And when I had served my sentence, I thought 'twould answer the best
To take the advice of Greeley: "Go West, young man, go West!"
And how I came to prosper there, I never could understand;
But Fortune seemed to like me—she gave me a winning hand!

And year after year I prospered, and kept a-going ahead;
And wrote to a trusty neighbor East, to tell 'em that I was dead;
And died a good straight fellow; for I knew it would please them more
Than if I had lived to a hundred and twelve — the chap that I was before!

But when this trusty neighbor — he wrote a line to me—
"Your mother's in the poor-house, a-pining away," says he:
To keep dead any longer — I knew that it wouldn't be right;
So I'd a private resurrection, and started for her that night.

And when I came in the old town, my first act was to buy
A snug and handsome cottage, which rather seemed to my eye
To look just like the old one; I finished it off the same;
You couldn't have told the difference—if you could, I wasn't to blame!

The same old clock in the corner; the fireplace, wide and high,
Sent up the smoke and cinders, and flung them towards the sky;

From garret down to cellar — 'twas all the self-same thing:
'Twas good enough for the President — 'twas fine enough for a king!

Then over the hill to the poor-house, one blustering winter day,
With two fleet nags and a cutter, I swiftly took my way:
The fleetest nags in the county, and both as black as coal—
They very much resembled the pair of horses I stole.

I hitched in front of the poor-house — I opened the poor-house door;
My poor old mother was on her knees, a-scrubbin' the kitchen floor!
I coughed a little, on purpose—she started, in surprise—
Rose up, with a scared expression, an' looked me in the eyes.

I slowly walked up to her, an' all her troubles' trace
I saw in the lines of sorrow that marred her dear old face:
"Mother, O Mother!" I shouted; "your poor-house contract's done;
An' you henceforth are adopted, by your resurrected son!"

She didn't faint nor holloa—but knelt down by my side,
And thanked the Lord for saving her me, till I broke down and cried;

But maybe our ride wasn't merry! and maybe we wasn't gay;
And maybe I didn't wrap her up that blustering winter day!

And maybe, when we had got home, and entered the cottage door,
She didn't start back kind of sudden—as if she'd seen it before!
And maybe it wasn't pleasant—our cosey evening tea—
With her quite often stoppin', and huggin', and kissin'
me!

And maybe we didn't live happy, for quite a number of years!
And I gained the respect of my neighbors — in spite of my brothers' sneers,
And spite of my sisters' caution; who said, as I have heard,
That they never could own a brother that had been a prison bird!

But I'll bet, when the great bugle rings out its cheerful notes,
And the good Lord Almighty sorts out His sheep
and goats,
However my case is settled, if you are there you'll see
That my old Christian mother will stand right up for me.

UNCLE SAMMY

Some men were born for great things,
  Some were born for small;
Some—it is not on record
  Why they were born at all;
But Uncle Sammy was certain he had a legitimate call.

Some were born with a talent,
  Some with scrip and land;
Some with a spoon of silver,
  And some with a different brand;
But Uncle Sammy came holding an argument in each hand.

Arguments sprouted within him,
  And twinkled in his eye;
He seemed to be merely debating
  When average babies cry:
Discussing the question whether 'twas better to live or die.

But prejudiced on that question
He grew from day to day,
And finally he concluded
'Twas better for him to stay;
And so into life's discussion he argued and argued his way.

Through childhood, through youth, into manhood
Argued and argued he;
And married a simple maiden,
Though scarcely in love was she;
But he reasoned the matter so clearly she hardly could help but agree.

And though at first she was blooming,
And the new firm started strong,
And though Uncle Sammy loved her,
And tried to help her along,
She faded away in silence, and 'twas evident something was wrong.

Now Uncle Sammy was faithful,
And various remedies tried;
He gave her the doctor's prescriptions,
And plenty of logic beside;
But logic and medicine failed him, and so one day she died.

He laid her away in the church-yard,
So haggard and crushed and wan;

And reared her a costly tombstone
With all of her virtues on;
And ought to have added, "A victim to arguments pro and con."

For many a year Uncle Sammy
Fired away at his logical forte:
Discussion was his occupation,
And altercation his sport;
He argued himself out of churches, he argued himself into court.

But alas for his peace and quiet,
One day, when he went it blind,
And followed his singular fancy,
And slighted his logical mind,
And married a ponderous lady that wasn't of the arguing kind!

Her sentiments all were settled;
Her habits were planted and grown;
Her heart was a starved little creature
That followed a will of her own;
And she raised a high hand with Sammy, and proceeded to play it alone.

Then Sammy he charged down upon her
With all of his strength and his wit,
And many a dext'rous encounter,
And many a fair shoulder-hit;
But vain were his blows and his blowing: he never could faze her a bit!

"WHO SAT WITH HIM LONG AT HIS TABLE"

He laid down his premises round her,
He hacked at her with his saws;
He rained great facts upon her,
And read her the marriage laws;
But the harder he tried to convince her, the harder and harder she was.

She brought home all her relations,
As many as ever she could—
With sentiments terribly settled,
And appetites horribly good—
Who sat with him long at his table, and explained to him where he stood.

And Sammy was not long in learning
To follow the swing of her gown,
And came to be wary in watching
The phase of her smile and her frown;
For she, with the heel of assertion, soon tramped all his arguments down.

And so, with his life-aspirations
Thus suddenly brought to a check—
And so, with the foot of his victor
Unceasingly pressing his neck—
He wrote on his face, "I'm a victim," and drifted — a logical wreck.

And fellows whom he had argued
To corners tight and fast,

Would wink at each other and chuckle,
And grin at him as he passed,
As to say, "My ambitious old fellow, your whiffletree's straightened at last."

Old Uncle Sammy one morning
Lay down on his comfortless bed,
And Death and he had a discussion,
And Death came out ahead;
And the fact that SHE failed to start him was only—the man was dead.

The neighbors laid out their old neighbor,
With homely but tenderest art;
And some of the oldest ones faltered,
And tearfully stood apart;
For the crusty old man had often unguardedly shown them his heart.

But on his face an expression
Of quizzical study lay,
As if he were sounding the angel
Who travelled with him that day,
And laying the pipes down slyly for an argument on the way.

And several younger parties
Crept round him with quiet feet,
And whispered, "P'rhaps when Uncle Sammy
Has examined the golden street,
He'll straightway fly to headquarters,
And argue—concerning his seat."

But God is a God of goodness,
With love for us all possessed;
And perhaps, now, he took Uncle Sammy,
And gave him a good night's rest,
And then introduced him to Solomon,
And said, "Sam, do your best."

An' when we got Tom's legs set, an' fixed him so's to speak,
He muttered that that adventur' would keep him a-writin' a week.

Tom he went a-ploughin', and couldn't have done it worse;
He sat down on the handles, an' went to spinnin' verse.
He wrote it nice and pretty—an agricultural ditty;
But all o' his pesky measures didn't measure an acre more,
Nor his p'ints didn't turn a furrow that wasn't turned before.

Tom he went a-courtin';—she liked him, I suppose;
But certain parts of courtin' a feller must do in prose.
He rhymed her each day a letter, but that didn't serve to get her:
He waited so long, she married another man from spite,
An' sent him word she'd done it, an' not to forget to write.

Tom at last got married; his wife was smart and stout,
An' she shoved up the window and slung his poetry out.
An' at each new poem's creation she gave it circulation;
An' fast as he would write 'em she seen to their puttin' forth;
An' sent 'em east an' westward, an' also south an' north.

Till Tom he struck the opinion that poetry didn't pay,
An' turned the guns of his genius, an' fired 'em another way.
He settled himself down steady, an' is quite well off already;
An' all of his life is verses, with his wife the first an' best,
An' ten or a dozen child'rn to constitute the rest.

GOIN' HOME TO-DAY

My business on the jury's done — the quibblin' all is through—
I've watched the lawyers right and left, and give my verdict true;
I stuck so long unto my chair, I thought I would grow in;
And if I do not know myself, they'll get me there ag'in.
But now the court's adjourned for good, and I have got my pay,
I'm loose at last, and thank the Lord, I'm going home to-day.

I've somehow felt uneasy like, since first day I come down;
It is an awkward game to play the gentleman in town;
And this 'ere Sunday suit of mine on Sunday rightly sets;
But when I wear the stuff a week, it somehow galls and frets.
I'd rather wear my homespun rig of pepper-salt and gray—
I'll have it on in half a jiff, when I get home to-day.

I have no doubt my wife looked out, as well as any one—
As well as any woman could—to see that things was done:
For though Melinda, when I'm there, won't set her foot out-doors,
She's very careful, when I'm gone, to tend to all the chores.
But nothing prospers half so well when I go off to stay,
And I will put things into shape, when I get home to-day!

The mornin' that I come away, we had a little bout;
I coolly took my hat and left, before the show was out.
For what I said was naught whereat she ought to take offence;
And she was always quick at words and ready to commence.
But then she's first one to give up when she has had her say;
And she will meet me with a kiss, when I go home to-day.

My little boy—I'll give 'em leave to match him, if they can;
It's fun to see him strut about, and try to be a man!
The gamest, cheeriest little chap, you'd ever want to see!
And then they laugh, because I think the child resembles me.

The little rogue! he goes for me, like robbers for their prey;
He'll turn my pockets inside out, when I get home to-day!

My little girl — I can't contrive how it should happen
thus—
That God could pick that sweet bouquet, and fling it down to us!
My wife, she says that han'some face will some day
make a stir;
And then I laugh, because she thinks the child resembles her.
She'll meet me half-way down the hill, and kiss me,
anyway;
And light my heart up with her smiles, when I go home to-day!

If there's a heaven upon the earth, a fellow knows it when He's been away from home a week, and then gets back again.
If there's a heaven above the earth, there often, I'll be bound,
Some homesick fellow meets his folks, and hugs 'em
all around.
But let my creed be right or wrong, or be it as it may,
My heaven is just ahead of me — I'm going home today!

[As Told in 1880]

OUT O' THE FIRE

YEAR of '71, children, middle of the fall,
On one fearful night, children, we wellnigh lost our all.
True, it wa'n't no great sum we had to lose that night,
But when a little's all you've got, it comes to a blessed sight.

I was a mighty worker, in them 'ere difficult days,
For work is a good investment, and almost always pays;
But when ten years' hard labor went smokin' into the air,
I doubted all o' the maxims, an' felt that it wasn't fair.

Up from the East we had travelled, with all of our household wares,
Where we had long been workin' a piece of land on shares;
But how a fellow's to prosper without the rise of the land,
For just two-thirds of nothin', I never could understand.

Up from the East we had travelled, me and my folks alone,
And quick we went to workin' a piece of land of our own;
Small was our backwoods quarters, and things looked mighty cheap;
But everything we put in there, we put in there to keep.

So, with workin' and savin', we managed to get along;
Managed to make a livin', and feel consid'able strong;
And things went smooth and happy, an' fair as the average run,
Till Fate went back upon me square, in the fall of '71.

First thing bothered and worried me, was 'long o' my daughter Kate:
Rather a han'some cre'tur', and folks all liked her gait.
Not so nice as them sham ones in yeller-covered books;
But still there wa'n't much discount on Katherine's ways an' looks.

And Katherine's smile was pleasant, and Katherine's temper was good,
And how she came to like Tom Smith, I never understood;
For she was a mornin'-glory, as fair as you ever see,
And Tom was a shag-bark hickory, as green as green could be.

"Like takes to like," is a proverb that's nothin' more than trash;
And many a time I've seen it all pulverized to smash.
For folks in no way sim'lar, I've noticed ag'in and ag'in,
Will often take to each other, and stick together like sin.

Next thing bothered and worried me, was 'long of a terrible drouth;
And me an' all o' my neighbors was some'at down in the mouth.
And week after week the rain held off, and things all pined an' dried,
And we drove the cattle miles to drink, and many of
'em died.

And day after day went by us, so han'some and so bright,
And never a drop of water came near us, day or night;
And what with the neighbors' grumblin', and what with my daily loss,
I must own that somehow or other I was gettin'
mighty cross.

And on one Sunday evenin' I was comin' down the lane
From meetin', where our preacher had stuck and hung for rain,
And various slants on things above kept workin' in my mind,
And the smoke from Sanders's fallow was makin' me
almost blind;

I opened the door kind o' sudden, an' there my Katherine sat,
As cosey as any kitten along with a friendly cat;
An' Tom was dreadful near her—his arm on the back of her chair—
And lookin' as happy and cheerful as if there was rain to spare.

"Get out of this house in a minute!" I cried, with all my might:
"Get out, while I'm a-talkin'!"—Tom's eyes showed a bit of fight;
But he rose up, stiff and surly, and made me a civil bow,
And walked along to the doorway, with never a word of row.

And I snapped up my wife quite surly when she asked me what I'd said,
And scolded Kate for cryin', and sent her up-stairs to bed;
And then I laid down, for the purpose of gettin' a little sleep,
An' the wind outside was a-howlin', and puttin' it in to keep.

'Twas half-past three next mornin', or maybe 'twas nearer four—
The neighbors they came a-yellin' and poundin' at my door;

"Get up! get up!" they shouted: "get up! there's danger near!
The woods are all a-burnin'! the wind is blowin' it here!"

If ever it happens, children, that you get catched, some time,
With fire a-comin' towards you, as fast as fire can climb,
You'll get up and get in a hurry, as quick as you can budge;
It's a lively season of the year, or else I ain't no judge

Out o' the dear old cabin we tumbled fast as we could—
Smashed two-thirds of our dishes, and saved some four-foot wood;
With smoke a-settlin' round us and gettin' into our eyes,
And fire a-roarin' an' cracklin' an' drowndin' all our cries.

And just as the roof was smokin', and we hadn't long to wait,
I says to my wife, "Now get out, and hustle, you and Kate!"
And just as the roof was fallin', my wife she come to me,
With a face as white as a corpse's face, and "Where is Kate?" says she.

And the neighbors came a-runnin' to me, with faces
black as the ground,
And shouted, "Where is Katherine? She's nowhere to be found!"
An' this is all I remember, till I found myself next
day,
A-lyin' in Sanders's cabin, a mile an' a half away.

If ever you wake up, children, with somethin' into your head,
Concernin' a han'some daughter, that's lyin' still an'
dead,
All scorched into coal-black cinders—perhaps you may not weep,
But I rather think it'll happen you'll wish you'd kept asleep.

And all I could say, was "Kath'rine, oh Kath'rine, come to me!"
And all I could think, was "Kath'rine!" and all that I could see,
Was Sanders a-standin' near to me, with pity in his eye,
And my wife a-bendin' over me, and tellin' me not to cry;

When lo! Tom Smith he entered—his face lit up with grins—
And KATE a-hangin' on his arm, as neat as a row of pins!

And Tom looked glad, but sheepish; and said, "Excuse me, Squire,
But I 'loped with Kate, and married her an hour before the fire."

Well, children, I was shattered; 'twas more than I could bear—
And I up and went for Kate an' Tom, and hugged 'em then and there!
And since that time, the times have changed, an' life isn't so much bother;
And—Katherine, she's your mother now, and—Thomas Smith's your father!

THE NEW CHURCH ORGAN

THEY'VE got a brand-new organ, Sue,
For all their fuss and search;
They've done just as they said they'd do,
And fetched it into church.
They're bound the critter shall be seen,
And on the preacher's right
They've hoisted up their new machine,
In everybody's sight.
They've got a chorister and choir,
Ag'in' my voice and vote;
For it was never my desire
To praise the Lord by note!

I've been a sister good an' true
For five-an'-thirty year;
I've done what seemed my part to do,
An' prayed my duty clear;
I've sung the hymns both slow and quick,
Just as the preacher read,
And twice, when Deacon Tubbs was sick,
I took the fork an' led!

"AG'IN' MY VOICE AND VOTE"

And now, their bold, new-fangled ways
Is comin' all about;
And I, right in my latter days,
Am fairly crowded out!

To-day the preacher, good old dear,
With tears all in his eyes,
Read, "I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies."
I al'ays liked that blesséd hymn—
I s'pose I al'ays will;
It somehow gratifies my whim,
In good old Ortonville;
But when that choir got up to sing,
I couldn't catch a word;
They sung the most outlandish thing
A body ever heard!

Some worldly chaps was standin' near;
An' when I see them grin,
I bid farewell to every fear,
And boldly waded in.
I thought I'd chase their tune along,
An' tried with all my might;
But though my voice is good an' strong,
I couldn't steer it right;
When they was high, then I was low,
An' also contrawise;
An' I too fast, or they too slow,
To "mansions in the skies."

An' after every verse, you know,
They play a little tune;
I didn't understand, an' so
I started in too soon.
I pitched it pretty middlin' high,
I fetched a lusty tone,
But oh, alas! I found that I
Was singin' there alone!
They laughed a little, I am told;
But I had done my best;
And not a wave of trouble rolled
Across my peaceful breast.

And Sister Brown—I could but look—
She sits right front of me;
She never was no singin'-book,
An' never went to be;
But then she al'ays tried to do
The best she could, she said;
She understood the time right through,
An' kep' it with her head;
But when she tried this mornin', oh,
I had to laugh, or cough!
It kep' her head a-bobbin' so,
It e'en a'most came off!

An' Deacon Tubbs—he all broke down,
As one might well suppose;
He took one look at Sister Brown,
And meekly scratched his nose,

An' looked his hymn-book through and through,
And laid it on the seat,
And then a pensive sigh he drew,
And looked completely beat.
An' when they took another bout,
He didn't even rise;
But drawed his red bandanner out,
An' wiped his weepin' eyes.

I've been a sister, good an' true,
For five-an'-thirty year;
I've done what seemed my part to do,
An' prayed my duty clear;
But Death will stop my voice, I know,
For he is on my track;
And some day I to church will go,
And never more come back;
And when the folks gets up to sing—
Whene'er that time shall be—
I do not want no patent thing
A-squealin' over me!

THE EDITOR'S GUESTS

THE Editor sat in his sanctum, his countenance furrowed with care,
His mind at the bottom of business, his feet at the top of a chair,
His chair-arm an elbow supporting, his right hand upholding his head,
His eyes on his dusty old table, with different documents spread:
There were thirty long pages from Howler, with underlined capitals topped,
And a short disquisition from Growler, requesting his newspaper stopped;
There were lyrics from Gusher, the poet, concerning sweet flow'rets and zephyrs,
And a stray gem from some good old farmer, describing a couple of heifers;
There were billets from beautiful maidens, and bills from a grocer or two,
And his last leader hitched to a letter, which inquired if he wrote it, or who?
There were raptures of praises from writers of the weakly mellifluous school,

And one of his rival's last papers, informing him he was a fool;
There were several long resolutions, with names telling whom they were by,
Canonizing some harmless old brother, when all he had done was to die;
There were traps on that table to catch him, and serpents to sting and to smite him;
There were gift enterprises to sell him, and bitters attempting to bite him;
There were long staring "ads" from the city, and money with never a one,
Which added, "Please give this insertion, and send in your bill when you're done";
There were letters from organizations—their meetings, their wants, and their laws—
Which said, "Can you print this announcement for—the good of our glorious cause?"
There were tickets inviting his presence to festivals, parties, and shows,
Wrapped in notes with "Please give us a notice" demurely slipped in at the close;
In short, as his eye took the table, and ran o'er its ink-spattered trash,
There was nothing it did not encounter, excepting perhaps it was cash.

The Editor dreamily pondered on several ponderous things:
On different lines of action, and the pulling of different strings;

Upon some equivocal doings, and some unequivocal duns;
On how few of his numerous patrons were quietly prompt-paying ones.
On friends who subscribed "just to help him," and wordy encouragement lent,
And had given him plenty of counsel, but never had paid him a cent;
On vinegar kind-hearted people were feeding him every hour,
Who saw not the work they were doing, but wondered that "printers are sour";
On various other small matters, sufficient his temper to roil,
And finely contrived to be making the blood of an editor boil;

And so one may see that his feelings could hardly be said to be smooth,
And he needed some pleasant occurrence his ruffled emotions to soothe:
He had it; for lo! on the threshold, a slow and reliable tread,
And a farmer invaded the sanctum, and these are the words that he said:

"Good-mornin', sir, Mr. Printer; how is your body today?
I'm glad you're to home; for you fellers is al'ays a-runnin' away.

Your paper last week wa'n't so spicy nor sharp as the one week before,
But I s'pose when the campaign is opened, you'll be whoopin' it up to 'em more.
That feller that's printin' The Smasher is goin' for you perty smart;
And our folks said this mornin' at breakfast, they thought he was gettin' the start.
But I hushed 'em right up in a minute, and said a good word for you;
I told 'em I b'lieved you was tryin' to do just as well
as you knew;
And I told 'em that some one was sayin', and whoever 'twas it is so,
That you can't expect much of no one man, nor blame him for what he don't know.
But, layin' aside pleasure for business: I've brought you my little boy Jim;
And I thought we perhaps could be makin' an editor
outen o' him.

"My family stock is increasin', while other folks' seems to run short.
I've got a right smart of a family—it's one of the old-fashioned sort.
There's Ichabod, Isaac, and Israel, a-workin' away on the farm—
They do 'bout as much as one good boy, and make things go off like a charm.
There's Moses and Aaron are sly ones, and slip like a couple of eels;

But they're tol'able steady in one thing — they al'ays git round to their meals.
There's Peter is busy inventin' (though what he invents I can't see),
And Joseph is studyin' medicine — and both of 'em
boardin' with me.
There's Sam smashed his nose at a shootin', and so
he is laid on the shelf,
And Abram and Albert is married, each workin' my farm for himself.
The rest of the boys are all growin', 'cept this little runt, which is Jim;
And I thought that perhaps I'd be makin' an editor
outen o' him.

"He ain't no great shakes for to labor, though I've labored with him a good deal,
And give him some strappin' good arguments I know
he couldn't help but to feel;
But he's built out of second-growth timber, and nothin' about him is big Exceptin' his appetite only, and there he's as good as a pig.
I keep him a-carryin' luncheons, and fillin' and bringin' the jugs,
And take him among the pertatoes, and set him to pickin' the bugs;
And then there is things to be doin' a-helpin' the women in-doors;
There's churnin' and washin' of dishes, and other descriptions of chores;

"I'VE BROUGHT YOU MY LITTLE BOY JIM"

But he don't take to nothin' but victuals, and he'll never be much, I'm afraid,
So I thought it would be a good notion to larn him the editor's trade.
His body's too small for a farmer, his judgment is rather too slim,
But I thought we perhaps could be makin' an editor outen o' him!

"It ain't much to get up a paper — it wouldn't take him long for to learn;
He could feed the machine, I'm thinkin', with a good strappin' fellow to turn.
And things that was once hard in doin' is easy enough now to do;
Just keep your eye on your machinery, and crack your arrangements right through.
I used for to wonder at readin', and where it was got up, and how;
But 'tis most of it made by machinery — I can see it all plain enough now.
And poetry, too, is constructed by machines of different designs,
Each one with a gauge and a chopper to see to the length of the lines;
An' since the whole trade has grow'd easy, 'twould be easy enough, I've a whim,
If you was agreed, to be makin' an editor outen of Jim!"

The Editor sat in his sanctum and looked the old man in the eye,

Then glanced at the grinning young hopeful, and mournfully made his reply:
"Is your son a small unbound edition of Moses and Solomon both?
Can he compass his spirit with meekness, and strangle a natural oath?
Can he leave all his wrongs to the future, and carry his heart in his cheek?
Can he do an hour's work in a minute, and live on a sixpence a week?
Can he courteously talk to an equal, and browbeat an impudent dunce?
Can he keep things in apple-pie order, and do half a dozen at once?
Can he press all the springs of knowledge, with quick and reliable touch,
And be sure that he knows how much to know, and knows how to not know too much?
Does he know how to spur up his virtue, and put a check-rein on his pride?
Can he carry a gentleman's manners within a rhinoceros' hide?
Can he know all, and do all, and be all, with cheerfulness, courage, and vim?
If so, we perhaps can be making an editor 'outen of him.'"

The farmer stood curiously listening, while wonder his visage o'erspread;
And he said, "Jim, I guess we'll be goin'; he's probably out of his head."

But lo! on the rickety staircase, another reliable tread,
And entered another old farmer, and these are the words that he said:

"Good-morning, sir, Mr. Editor, how is the folks to-day?
I owe you for next year's paper; I thought I'd come in and pay.
And Jones is a-goin' to take it, and this is his money here;
I shut down on lendin' it to him, and coaxed him to try it a year.
And here is a few little items that happened last week in our town:
I thought they'd look good for the paper, and so I just jotted 'em down.
And here is a basket of cherries my wife picked expressly for you;
And a small bunch of flowers from Jennie — she thought she must send somethin' too.
You're doin' the politics bully, as all of our family agree;
Just keep your old goose-quill a-floppin', and give 'em a good one for me!
And now you are chuck-full of business, and I won't be takin' your time;
I've things of my own I must 'tend to—good-day, sir, I b'lieve I will climb."

The Editor sat in his sanctum, with countenance smiling and bland;

"God bless that old farmer," he muttered, "and long may he live in the land!"

And 'tis thus with our noble profession, and thus it will ever be, still;
There are some who appreciate its labors, and some who perhaps never will.
But in the great time that is coming, when loudly the trumpet shall sound,
And they who have labored and rested come out of the quivering ground;
When they who have striven and suffered to teach and ennoble the race,
Shall march at the front of the column, each one in his God-given place,
As they pass through the gates of The City with proud and victorious tread,
The editor, printer, and "devil," will travel not far from the head.

THE HOUSE WHERE WE WERE WED

I've been to the old farm-house, good-wife,
  Where you and I were wed;
Where the love was born to our two hearts
  That now lies cold and dead.
Where a long-kept secret to you I told,
  In the yellow beams of the moon,
And we forged our vows out of love's own gold,
  To be broken so soon, so soon!

I passed through all the old rooms, good-wife;
  I wandered on and on;
I followed the steps of a flitting ghost,
  The ghost of a love that is gone.
And he led me out to the arbor, wife,
  Where with roses I twined your hair;
And he seated me down on the old stone step,
  And left me musing there.

The sun went down as it used to do,
  And sank in the sea of night;
The two bright stars that we called ours
  Came slowly unto my sight;

But the one that was mine went under a cloud—
  Went under a cloud alone;
And a tear that I wouldn't have shed for the world,
  Fell down on the old gray stone.

But there be words can ne'er be unsaid,
  And deeds can ne'er be undone,
Except perhaps in another world,
  Where life's once more begun.
And maybe some time in the time to come,
  When a few more years are sped,
We'll love again as we used to love,
  In the house where we were wed.

REUNITED

THE white-winged Winter storm swept swiftly past,
Or paused to hover o'er the farm-house old,
And shed its cold, white plumage on the roof,
Thatching it thicker every icy hour.
A million snow-flakes struggled with the wind,
Careered, and dashed, and fell, and rose again,
As striving, each, to live its longest time,
Ere vanishing to an inglorious whole—
Lost—nevermore a snow-flake.

Every thing
Wore, on that day, the frost-fringed badge of Death.
The clouds were palls, and every drift a shroud;
The apple-trees were singing funeral hymns,
The leafless maples listening to the dirge;
And on yon hill the wind-stripped forest-trees
Arose like graves of skeletons upright.

But not content, to-day, with out-door rule,
Death through the cottage-door had made his way
(And who so laughs to scorn the bolts and walls?),
Crouched his chill form before the kitchen fire,
And smiled to see his glance put out the blaze.

She lay—the mother of a helpless flock—
Unheeding all the childish tears of grief,
That else had wasted not a single note,
Without her loving and consoling kiss.
The children bent above her lifeless form,
Or tiptoed drearily from room to room,
As if in search of that sweet soul, which once
Had lighted all the house with love and peace;
Or glanced, with eyes half curious and half sad,
At the pale father, who, stunned, bent, and crushed
By this swift blow, was rallying now his strength
To bear the grief.

Ah! many friends we love
May climb the gilded mountains of the clouds,
And find the regions of the farther sky,
Ere we can leave this land of fleshly ghosts,
And join the kingdom of realities.
The earth must beat on many a coffin-lid
Fit time to strains of sorrow in our hearts,
For those above whose lifeless breast it falls.
Life's turnpike scowls with toll-gates of the graves!
And yet, a hundred losses come and go,
Each in its turn may bend us to the earth,
And, while we do but mourn the latest ill,
Some crushing sorrow may outweigh them all!

What picture can be drearier to the heart
Than a loved sister, lying in her shroud?
To feel no more the clinging confidence
That rested on you from her clear, pure eyes;

To know that Death, a suitor undesired,
Has proudly drawn that lingering hand from yours,
And led her silently away with him,
Into the shadows of his own dark land;
To feel so many flowers of memory nipped
By the same frost that rests upon her brow;
To think of all the past—the darling past—
With half-neglected sweets, forever gone;
Ah, yes!—a sister's loss is hard to bear;
But there are other griefs.

A brother's grave
Rests ever 'neath the head-stone of despair.
There is no sound so mournful as the hush
That lingers o'er a sturdy death-stilled heart;
No power that so the tender soul can move
As the inaction of a brawny arm.
For Memory lingers with us round that grave,
Awarding and avenging all the past:
Pouring a balm for each good act and word,
And dealing thrusts for all that was unkind;
While Pity hovers all about the scene,
And weeps that one so strong should helpless lie.
Ah, yes! a brother's loss is hard to bear!
And yet, there are more griefs.

A father's voice
May hush its words of counsel and reproof,
Its blessings, and its hopeful words of cheer,
And sink in Silence's unfathomed sea.
A father's coffin holds a treasure lost;

A father's love is wondrous strong and true,
Even though not unmixed with selfish pride;
A father's loss is heavy to be borne;
But there are drearier, heavier griefs.

The pang—
The cruel pang, the never-ceasing pang—
That turns the sweets of life to bitterness,
All zephyrs unto tempests, and each breeze
To organ tones of woe; the hopeless pang
That pits rebellious life against itself,
When the strong cord, the golden, love-charged cord,
That holds a wife and mother to her own,
Severs, and falls in ruins at our feet,
And mocks us with its brightness 'mid the dust!
There is no loss, except the loss of heaven,
Like that which fills a wife and mother's shroud;
There is no love, except the love of God,
Like that which fills a wife and mother's heart!

It is a fire that never can be quenched,
Though base ingratitude be on it poured;
Though wickedness may wrap and clasp it 'round.
E'en he who flees the answer to its prayers,
Still sees, along his crookéd, thorny path,
The sweet refulgence of its constant light;
And though he creep through vilest caves of sin,
And crouch, perhaps, with bleared and bloodshot eyes,
Under the hangman's rope—a mother's lips
Will kiss him in his last bed of disgrace,
And love him e'en for what she hoped of him.

While yet reposed the mother of that flock,
In the white drapery of her burial robes,
The door swung swiftly on its creaking hinge,
And, heeding not the startled, wondering look
Of the sad father, as he raised his eyes,
And sighed for sorrow of the hopeless past,
A young and fragile form crept softly in,
With locks dishevelled, with tear-fevered eyes,
And face as white as she had been the dead.
Upon her brow were drawn long lines of care,
And marks that told of waywardness and vice.

Scarce heeding them whose wondering eyes arose,
She hastened to the sleeper; and with tears
Of penitence, that well might pay the debt
That sin and disobedience had run up—
If tears could pay such debts — she clasped the form
Unto her breast, and kissed the unanswering lips,
And thus she spoke:

"O mother, mother lost!
Thou 'rt here, yet gone so far! I still can see
The gentle smile that lingers on thy face,
But cannot hear thy kind, consoling voice!
My impure lips may kiss thy sacred cheek,
Yet feel no kindly pressure back again!
My words of grief and penitence may fall,
With pardon humbly asked, upon thine ear,
And yet thou canst not hear them; and no word
Of blest forgiveness canst thou answer back!

"O mother, wronged, wronged, foully, bitterly!
Crushed by ingratitude, and all the shame
That one like me could heap upon thy pride!
Spurned, when thou followedst me, e'en in my guilt,
Down to the darkest depths of wayward sin,
And begged, with tears, that I would come with thee,
And tread the paths of virtue once again!

"Give to me but one word; one little word
Of pardon, for the dark and shameful past;
One short, one fleeting word; nay, even a breath;
Or lend to me a sign; a smile; a glance;
That I may feel forgiveness for my sin!
I cannot see thee laid into thy grave,
Without one word of pardon and of love!
And if, O God! thou wilt but let her come,
But just to speak one single word to me,
I vow to Thee my lips shall sing Thy praise,
My heart shall beat accordance with Thy word,
And truth and virtue shall adorn my life,
Until this weary heart may cease to beat."

As the frail plantlet, bursting from its seed,
Casts off the earth that rests upon its head,
And springs to new-made beauty—so this prayer,
Cleaving the guilt and shame that o'er it hung,
Bloomed fair and pure before the All-seeing eye.
And it was answered. From her deathly trance
The mother woke; and, lifting up her head,
Said, "Where am I?—a deep, long sleep was mine.
I dreamed that in the fields of Paradise,

A shepherdess, I watched and fed a flock;
Till the Almighty came to me, and said,
'Matron, return unto thy flock below,
For they are chilled by the cold, wintry storm.
And one, which long time went from thee astray,
Worn, soiled, but penitent, to-day returns.
She shall henceforth be led by Heaven's pure light,
And thou shalt take her, chastened, to thine arms.'"

HOW JAMIE CAME HOME

COME, Mother, set the kettle on,
An' put the ham an' eggs to fry!
Something to eat, old-fashioned-neat—
To please our Jamie's mouth and eye!
For he's our only son, you know;
The rest ha' perished, long ago!
And when he comes to us to-night,
His glad, blue eyes will sparkle bright,
His old, sweet smile will play right free,
His boyhood home once more to see.

I say for't! 'twas a lucky thing
That Jamie was not maimed or killed!
So many years, with pain an' tears,
With long an' bloody battles filled!
And many a night-time, dark an' drear,
We've lain within our cottage here,
And while the cold storm came an' went
We've thought of Jamie, in his tent;
And offered many a silent prayer,
That God would keep him in his care.

I say for't! 'twas a lucky thing
That Jamie was not maimed or killed!
So many years, with hopes an' fears,
With dark, death-laden tidings filled!
And many a morning, full o' fear,
We've knelt around our fireside here,
And while we've thought of bleeding ones,
Of flashing steel and blazing guns,
We've prayed for him we sent out there,
Addressed in God's paternal care.

Nay, Ada, daughter, come away;
Touch not a thing upon that shelf!
Mother, she knows where each dish goes:
Mother shall lay them all herself!
There's nothing, to the wanderer's taste,
Like food where mother's hand is traced;
There's nothing, to the wanderer's look,
Like food her cunning hand can cook.
Though good the sister's heart and will,
The mother's love is better still.

Hark! there's his step!—he's coming now!
I thought—yes, there's the sound once more!
Now with glad feet and smiles, we'll greet
The truant, at our open door!
It is a heavy step and tone,
And more—the lad is not alone!
Perhaps the company extends
To some of his old comrade-friends;

And who they be, or whence they came,
They shall be greeted all the same.

What bear ye on your shoulders, men?
  Is it my Jamie, stark and dead?
What did you say? . . . Once more, I pray,
  I did not gather what you said.
What, drunk?—tell not that lie to me!
What, drunk? O God, it cannot be!
It must not be my Jamie dear,
Lying in beast-like slumber here!
It is—it is—as you have said.
Men, lay him on yon waiting bed.

'Tis Jamie—yes—a bearded man,
  But bearing yet some boyhood's trace;
Stained with the ways of reckless days—
  Flushed with night-revels—is his face;
Red with the fruits of reckless years;
Robbed of each look that e'er endears;
Robbed of each mark that e'er might make
Us cherish him for his own sake,
Except the heart-distressing one,
That Jamie is our only son!

O Mother, take the kettle off,
  And put our humble feast away!
What was my crime, and when the time,
  That I should live to see this day?
For all the sighs I ever drew,
And all the grief I ever knew,

"WHAT WAS MY CRIME?"

And all the bitter tears I shed
Above our children that are dead,
All cares that ever creased my brow,
Are naught to what comes o'er me now!

I would to God that when the three
  We lost were hidden from our view,
Jamie had died, and by their side
  Had lain, all pure and stainless, too!
I would the sky might bend above
The grave of him we joyed to love,
Rather than that he living came
To bring this home disgrace and shame!
But, Mother—Ada—come this way,
And let us humbly kneel and pray.

THE CLANG OF THE YANKEE REAPER

THE clang of the Yankee reaper,
On Salisbury Plain!
A music grander—deeper—
Than many a nobler strain.

Across that British prairie
I tramped, one summer day:
The breeze was free and merry—
White lamb-clouds were at play;

With fleecy wealth was teeming
The shepherd's paddock fold;
And ripened grain stood gleaming
Like lakes of melted gold;

Far off were grimly looming
Stonehenge's mystery-piles;
Beneath the feet were blooming
A floweret's modest smiles;

And nature's wondrous being
The gladdened eye possessed;

"THE CLANG OF THE YANKEE REAPER"

But what is cheery of seeing,
When the heart is ill at rest?

For deep waves of emotion
Had all that day prevailed,
And over the broad blue ocean
My sad heart swiftly sailed.

Across the cold sea sailing,
My dreary memory roved;
Sweet old-time scenes unveiling,
With true friends, fondly loved;

And brought back many a feeling
That long had dwelt apart,
Till through my life came stealing
The pangs of a homesick heart.

And never the sea's wide reaches
Seemed half the fathoms o'er,
Or the West-land's shining beaches
So far away before.

When richer, sweeter, deeper
Than a distant music strain,
Came the clang of the Yankee reaper
On Salisbury Plain!

As when the heart is weeping
'Neath slowly crushing hours,
The fragrance soft comes creeping
Of memory-hallowed flowers;

As when, with sudden gleaming,
  Above some foreign dome,
Against the sky goes streaming
  The flag of our nation-home;

So from my heart the sadness
  In silence gently stole,
And rich new strains of gladness
  Came thrilling through my soul.

"WHY SHOULD THEY KILL MY BABY?"

[The aged mother of the late President Garfield is reported to have exclaimed as above, upon hearing the news of his attempted assassination.]

WHY should they kill my baby? — for he seems the same to me
As when, in the morning twilight, I tossed him on my knee,
And sowed for him hopes to blossom when he should be a man,
And dreamed for him such a future as only a mother can.

I looked ahead to the noon-time with proud but trembling joy;
I had a vision of splendor for my sweet, bright-eyed boy;
But little enough I fancied that, when he had gained renown,
Base Envy's poisoned bullet would suddenly strike him down!

Why should they want to kill him? Because he had cut his way Through Poverty's gloomy woodland out into the open day,

And sent a shout of good cheer to those who were yet within,
That honor is born of striving, and honesty yet can win?

Or was it because from boyhood he manfully bared his breast
To fight for the poor and lowly, and aid the sore oppressed?
Ah me! the world is working upon a treacherous plan,
When he who has struck for mankind is stricken down by man!

Or did they begrudge his mother the hand he reached her still,
No odds how high he clambered up Fortune's glittering hill?
For in his proudest life-day he turned from the honors of earth,
And came and tenderly kissed me — the mother who gave him birth.

Shame on the wretch who struck him, and prays that the blow may kill!
And pity for his mother, if she be living still!
May God in mercy aid him his black crime to atone,
And help me to forgive him—I cannot do it alone!

THE OLD MAN MEDITATES

NAY, Maggie, let my old-style fancies be—
I'm sorry that you interrupted me!
'Tis sweet to press a pretty hand like this,
And taste the flavor of a grandchild's kiss;
I love to draw you to me tender-wise,
And look off at my boyhood through your eyes
(For they are telescopes of wondrous view
That bring me back a girl that looked like you);
Your voice is, as you just now used it last,
A silver key that takes me through the past;
And now you're here, you girl-witch, you shall stay,
But still I'd rather you had kept away.

For I've been sitting here an hour, I'll own,
Catching some thoughts a man holds best alone;
And shadows on my poor old soul have found
That might feel chilly like, to folks around.
I've seen the sun go sailing out of sight,
Far from the gloomy, shifting shores of night,
And wondered (though perhaps 'twas wicked) why
God would not swing those gold doors of the sky,

And take me from this world, that's grown so strange,
To heaven, where maybe fashions do not change;
For I am like a gnarled and withered tree
With a new growth of forest shading me.

The world keeps newing so!—they fashion it
So old men find no place wherein to fit.
"On and right on!" leaps hot from every tongue;
"Live while you live!" and "Go it while you're young!"
An average, moderate life, if these things last,
Will be among the lost arts of the past;
These rushing days of lightning and of steam
Push everything out into some extreme.
The rich grow richer, smarter grow the smart;
It's harder for the rest to get a start;
And Wholesale grows more Wholesale every day,
And Retail has to stand back out the way.
It's hard to tell, 'mid all Progression's jumps,
How far this world will make up into lumps.
Farewell, old churn, and dasher fringed with cream,
These times when cows are all but milked by steam!
And in the bustling dairy may be found
Butter by tons, instead of by the pound;
While several of the corner groceries keep
Its bogus brother, oleomargarine, cheap!

Good-bye, old country mill of water-power:
This steam one does your week's work in an hour!
Adieu, gas, tallow, kerosene, and whale:
The blue-eyed, earth-born lightning makes you pale!

You sailing craft, make wide your fluttering crown,
Lest the great fire-fed frigate run you down!
Old-fashioned politics, cease your mild strife,
When men can say "An office or your life!"
And you, small rogues, ere you so guilty feel
Because a thousand dollars you may steal,
Look at that scamp of sanctimonious style,
Who pilfers millions with unfearing smile!

Once I my sorrel nag in peace could drive,
With some fair chance of reaching home alive;
Now, every other mile a sign-board bars,
With "Railroad Crossing: look out for the Cars."
These cars—they carry thousands in a day,
And maybe take some that had better stay;
While often, in a crash of wail and woe,
They take folks where they do not want to go!
And I have heard and read distressing things
Of railroad cliques, monopolies, and rings:
I've tried to understand their "stock reports,"
Their "bulls" and "bears," their curious "longs" and "shorts;"
Wherefrom the most that I can calculate
Is, if to fall among them is your fate,
Your heart, ere many months, will sing the song,
"My pocket's short, my countenance is long."
It may be right, the way those fellows do it,
But old men cannot fit themselves down to it!

Once all my worries (and a plenty, too)
Were kind of circumscribed to folks I knew;

But now the telegraph and papers try
To bring this whole world underneath the eye,
And my old fool heart into sorrow drive
O'er deaths of folks I didn't know were alive.
It is an interesting fact to know
That news can sweep across the country so;
But it gets out of breath, I calculate,
And sometimes fails to tell the story straight;
And talk that's false, or frivolous, or too small,
The slower it goes, the better for us all.
It's smart, this flashing news from shore to shore,
But old men value peace a good deal more.

In the hay-field how gallant and how blithe
Sang their loud song my whetstone and my scythe!
How in the dewy morning used to pass
My bright blade's whisper through the shuddering grass!
And gayly in the harvest fields of old
My sickle gathered God's most precious gold.
But now the patent reaper rattles there,
The men it drove out gone — the Lord knows where.
It brags and rattles through the field in haste,
Gathers the harvest—what it does not waste—
And leaves not much for poor old men like me,
Except to sit upon the fence and see.
God bade man till the soil; but it would seem
He's shirked it off on horses, steel, and steam.
It's well—if he don't use the extra time
In wicked mischief or mischievous crime.

"YOUR GRANDAM MADE HER OWN TRIM WEDDING-DRESS"

This giving Work the go-by may be smart,
But, I have noticed, doesn't improve the heart.
I know I'm 'way behind these rushing days,
But still I like the good old working ways!

Your grandam made her own trim wedding-dress,
And fitted it, and wove it too, I guess;
There never, Maggie, was a witching elf
That went past her—not even you yourself.
You have her gentle eyes, her voice, her touch—
But, sakes! you cost a hundred times as much!
They've had to flute, and flounce, and trick you out,
And squeeze, and pull, and jerk you all about,
Till it's a question rather hard to meet,
How you came through it all so good and sweet!

You wouldn't have had to bother in that way,
If some cute Yankee had not, one fine day,
Placed, with eyes made by money-hunger keen,
A sewing circle in one small machine,
Which hungers after cloth and thread; and so
Dress often takes up some new furbelow.
My old-style pocket with gaunt pain it fills;
But I won't groan—I do not pay the bills!

Church matters, maybe, ain't for me to name,
For true religion always keeps the same;
And they may higgle, contradict, and doubt,
And turn the good old Bible wrong side out;
But they can't change, however hard they try,
Arrangements on the top side of the sky.

I like to read the new way that 'tis told—
It often helps me understand the old;
But when my daily prayers I come to say,
I think I'll use the good old-fashioned way.
He taught that grand old prayer to us, you know—
'Twas more than eighteen hundred years ago;
And if its words were anyway amiss,
He'd probably have told us long ere this.
Leastways, He's heard me so far in that style,
And I'll hang to it yet a little while.
Ah me! this matter's just like all the rest:
Old ways for old men surely are the best.

But whatsoever changes I can name,
One institution always keeps the same,
And soon or late enacts its noble part,
And that's the grand and glorious human heart.
Perhaps it lurks in wretchedness and slime—
Is dragged by Passion through the waves of crime;
Or Indolence around its couch may creep,
And lull it for a season into sleep;
Or Selfishness may ravage all about,
Eat its supplies and wellnigh starve it out;
But when it can the body's grossness shed,
The godlike human heart comes out ahead!

No, Maggie, do not go away from me,
But turn your eyes round here where I can see;
They show me that there's much that earth can give
Designed to coax an old man yet to live;

The tender, true heart you have always shown
In brightening up my dim life with your own,
The way you've treated me—with as much grace
As if I owned three-quarters of this place,
While you and all your folks are well aware
My purse is full of poverty to spare—
Show, in the sandy shifting of life's ways,
That Love's first fashion still among us stays;
And that young fellow coming down the lane
Will help to make my meaning doubly plain.

APPLE-BLOSSOMS

UNDERNEATH an apple-tree
  Sat a maiden and her lover:
And the thoughts within her he
  Yearned, in silence, to discover.
Round them danced the sunbeams bright,
  Green the grass-lawn stretched before them;
While the apple-blossoms white
  Hung in rich profusion o'er them.

Naught within her eyes he read
  That would tell her mind unto him;
Though their light, he after said,
  Quivered swiftly through and through him;
Till at last his heart burst free
  From the prayer with which 'twas laden,
And he said, "When wilt thou be Mine for evermore, fair maiden?"

"When," said she, "the breeze of May
With white flakes our heads shall cover,
I will be thy brideling gay—
Thou shalt be my husband-lover."
"How," said he, in sorrow bowed,
"Can I hope such hopeful weather?
Breeze of May and Winter's cloud
Do not often fly together."

Quickly as the words he said,
From the west a wind came sighing,
And on each uncovered head
Sent the apple-blossoms flying:
"'Flakes of white!' thou'rt mine," said he,
"Sooner than thy wish or knowing!"
"Nay, I heard the breeze," quoth she,
"When in yonder forest blowing."

APPLES GROWING

UNDERNEATH an apple-tree
Sat a dame of comely seeming,
With her work upon her knee,
And her great eyes idly dreaming.
O'er the harvest-acres bright,
Came her husband's din of reaping;
Near to her an infant wight
Through the tangled grass was creeping.

On the branches long and high,
And the great green apples growing,
Rested she her wandering eye,
With a retrospective knowing.
"This," she said, "the shelter is,
Where, when gay and raven-headed,
I consented to be his,
And our willing hearts were wedded.

"Laughing words and peals of mirth
Long are changed to grave endeavor;
Sorrow's winds have swept to earth
Many a blossomed hope forever.

Thunder-heads have hovered o'er—
  Storms my path have chilled and shaded;
Of the bloom my gay youth bore,
  Some has fruited—more has faded."

Quickly, and amid her sighs,
  Through the grass her baby wrestled,
Smiled on her its father's eyes,
  And unto her bosom nestled.
And with sudden, joyous glee,
  Half the wife's and half the mother's,
"Still the best is left," said she:
  "I have learned to live for others."

THE CHRISTMAS-TREE

WHERE grows the Christmas-tree—
The green, deep-rooted Christmas-tree?
By what brave toil, in what rich soil,
Can spring the blooming Christmas-tree?
Is it from prairies broad and deep
Where future harvests softly sleep,
And flocks of acres, far and free,
Lie level as a waveless sea?
Or is it where a breeze-skein twines
Between the lofty-plumaged pines?
Or where a stealthy languor roves
Among the Southland orange-groves?
Or blooms it best 'mid city homes,
With Wealth's unnumbered spires and domes?
Or is it where, through changeful day,
The mountain shadows creep and play,
And swift a gleaming sun-flood rides
Along the tall cliff's dappled sides?
High grows the Christmas-tree,
The sweet, love-planted Christmas-tree—
Where'er extends the hand of friends;
Wherever heart-caressings be.

What bears the Christmas-tree—
The bright, rich-fruited Christmas-tree?
What gather they, expectant-gay,
Who throng around the Christmas-tree?
Leaves picked by love-instructed art
From off the branches of the heart;
Fruits culled from every tree and vine
Where zephyrs float and sunbeams shine.
Whate'er can brighten to our gaze
The trembling dawn of childhood days;
Whate'er can feed more clear and high
The flame of youth's expectant eye;
Whate'er can make more richly good
The blood of man or womanhood,
Or bid old age look smiling round
At gems of earth-joy newly found;
Whate'er can say, "While strength endures,
My life has love and help for yours."
Rich glows the Christmas-tree,
The heart-protected Christmas-tree—
With tokens dear that bring more near God's earth-lent love to you and me.

AUTUMN DAYS

YELLOW, mellow, ripened days,
  Sheltered in a golden coating;
O'er the dreamy, listless haze,
  White and dainty cloudlets floating;
Winking at the blushing trees,
  And the sombre, furrowed fallow;
Smiling at the airy ease
  Of the southward-flying swallow:
Sweet and smiling are thy ways,
Beauteous, golden Autumn days!

Shivering, quivering, tearful days,
  Fretfully and sadly weeping;
Dreading still, with anxious gaze,
  Icy fetters round thee creeping;
O'er the cheerless, withered plain,
  Wofully and hoarsely calling;
Pelting hail and drenching rain
  On thy scanty vestments falling.
Sad and mournful are thy ways,
Grieving, wailing Autumn days!

THE FADING FLOWER

THERE is a chillness in the air—
A coldness in the smile of day;
And e'en the sunbeam's crimson glare
Seems shaded with a tinge of gray.

Weary of journeys to and fro,
The sun low creeps adown the sky;
And on the shivering earth below,
The long, cold shadows grimly lie.

But there will fall a deeper shade,
More chilling than the Autumn's breath:
There is a flower that yet must fade,
And yield its sweetness up to death.

She sits upon the window-seat,
Musing in mournful silence there,
While on her brow the sunbeams meet,
And dally with her golden hair.

She gazes on the sea of light
That overflows the western skies,

Till her great soul seems plumed for flight
From out the window of her eyes.

Hopes unfulfilled have vexed her breast,
Sad smiles have checked the rising sigh;
Until her weary heart confessed,
Reluctantly, that she must die.

And she has thought of all the ties—
The golden ties—that bind her here;
Of all that she has learned to prize,
Of all that she has counted dear;

The joys of body, heart, and mind,
The pleasures that she loves so well;
The grasp of friendship, warm and kind,
And love's delicious, hallowed spell.

And she has wept, that she must lie
Beneath the snow-wreaths, drifted deep,
With no fond mother standing nigh,
To watch her in her silent sleep.

And she has prayed, if it might be Within the reach of human skill,
And not averse to Heaven, that she Might live a little longer still.

But earthly hope is gone; and now
Comes in its place a brighter beam,
Leaving upon her snowy brow
The impress of a heavenly dream:

That she, when her frail body yields,
  And fades away to mortal eyes,
Shall burst through Heaven's eternal fields,
  And bloom again—in Paradise.

PICNIC SAM

YOU youngsters who haven't heard of Picnic Sam,
Just gather up around here where I am,
And listen sharp while memory wanders through him,
And brings out what he seemed like when I knew him.
He lived in one of those high-stretched affairs
Called tenements—up any amount of stairs;
His room there, when the tired streets he forsook,
Was just what room he crowded in and took.
Though he "lived high," he never had the gout,
And for the most part took his dinners out.
Breakfast and supper were not in his way;
His motto always was, One meal per day;
Or rather, maybe, when you squarely met it,
One meal per day, provided I can get it.
His garments—well, you've stood and looked, perhaps,
At those plump, little, beaming, made-up chaps,
With nobby coats, and smiling, painted faces,
The clothing dealer in his window places
(To make meat children envious, I suppose);
Well, Sam wasn't dressed at all like one of those.
Raiment like his no lively lad enjoys;
It had been cut for several different boys,

And, taking garments as they come and go,
He had about one suit—or nearly so.
His face suggested, to the casual sight,
A bull-dog's when he's spoiling for a fight;
And on it might be traced full many a streak,
As though it were not laundered once a week.
And yet his eyes were handsome, for a fact
(That is, of course, the one that was not blacked,
For he had fighting—more or less—to do);
But his well eye looked rather good and true.

You youngsters, gather round here where I am—
I'll tell you why they called him Picnic Sam.
This young home-heathen had, by day and night,
A genuine first-class picnic appetite;
And, with a zeal good children stood in fear of,
Attended every picnic he could hear of.
When Sunday-schools were going to have "a spread,"
He'd always join, a week or two ahead;
And though no "verses" he had ever learned,
Tried to look serious like and deep concerned,
And (if some good boy he was sitting near)
Would answer every question, loud and clear.
'Twas strange, when near the time of feasting came,
How sure a school was to get Samuel's name.
"Why," said a teacher, rather prone to scoff,
"He'll smell a picnic full a fortnight off."
'Twas strange, in different schools he ravaged round in,
What various kinds of classes he'd be found in.
Three times or more, he gravely tried to pass
As member of an old folks' Bible class;

And once appeared (rough brickbat among pearls)
In a small, timid infant class of girls!
But, in whatever company he came,
His appetite stood by him all the same.

No picnic near, in weather foul or pleasant,
But Sam and stomach managed to be present;
And when, with innocent, unconscious air,
He placed himself at table, firm and square,
With one eye partly closed, the other looking
Intently at the different styles of cooking;
And when, with savage-gleaming knife and fork,
He brought himself down seriously to work,
And marched through every dish in conquering glory,
And ravaged all the adjacent territory,
Making the table for some distance round
Look like a fiercely hard-fought battle-ground,
A smile upon his placid face would fall,
As if life wasn't a failure, after all.

But when the exciting dinner-hour was gone,
Sam always seemed uncalled for and alone;
Felt snubbed and frozen and made quiet game of:
Slights that he didn't even know the name of,
But which he felt as keenly (do not doubt it)
As if some foe had told him all about it.
He always felt by that vague feeling haunted
That hangs around folks when they are not wanted.

Well, on one day particularly fine,
Sam felt himself invited to help dine

With (in a small grove, shady, fresh, and cool)
A recently discovered Sunday-school:
Which, when he'd joined, he'd muttered, "This 'll pass.
It's a swell crowd; the board 'll be first-class."
And so it was; and for an hour or more
Sam slew things as he never had before,
Wondering, with a gastronomic smile,
Where all these victuals 'd been all this long while;
And made the teachers feel a great surprise
That they'd so overrated their supplies;
And in his stomach could not but confess
That life to-day was one good square success.

Then, after dinner, feeling cute and smart,
He tried to make a little social start;
And frisk and frolic round, like any other,
And be accepted as a boy and brother.
But all the children shrank, with scarce-hid loathing,
From a strange lad in such imperfect clothing;
And soon Sam's face a misty sadness wore,
As if to say, "I b'lieve I'm snubbed once more."
He tried to put them under obligations
With street accomplishments and fascinations:
In turning somersaults and hand-springs led;
Whistled and sang, danced, stood upon his head;
E'en tried a friendly sparring match: till taken
Right in the act, misunderstood, and shaken
(By the strong mother of the lad he battled),
Till the provisions in him fairly rattled.
But whatsoe'er he did, discreet or bold,
It seemed to drive him farther in the cold.

"BOUGH, BRICKBAT AMONG PEARLS"

The grove was near a river; on whose brink
Samuel sat down, with lots of time to think,
And watch some light boats swiftly past him go,
With happy children flitting to and fro,
Content to see him safe and dry on land:
Sam muttered, "No, I ain't much in demand."

Just then a trim young girl came tripping by,
With golden hair, and more than handsome eye;
And Sam remarked, his face full of glad creases,
"That's the smart girl that scooped 'em speakin' pieces;
I wonder if she learned hers like a song,
Or made the speech up as she went along?
She came out first, though last upon the track,
But spoke so long it held the dinner back;
Still, what she said was sweet an' soothin' rather,
'Bout how 'We all are children of one Father.'
If that's so, she's half-sister unto me—
At least I think I'll speak to her, and see."
Then, thinking pleasantly to clear the way,
He shouted, "Miss, this 'ere's a pleasant day!"
But she flounced on, more haughty than before;
And Sam remarked, "I b'lieve I'm snubbed once more."

While, roughly sad, the boy sat musing yet,
He heard a shout, "Help! help! our boat's upset!"
And, following with his eyes the fear-edged scream,
Sam saw three children struggling in the stream.
And two were rescued; one went 'neath the wave;
The waters closed above her like a grave.

She sank, apparently to rise no more,
While frantic crowds ran up and down the shore,
And, 'mid the turmoil, each one did his best,
Shouting first-class instructions to the rest.
"It's the swell girl," thought Sam, "that's made this row;
I wonder how she likes the weather now?
I'd save her—if it wasn't too much bother—
'Good deeds for evil—children of one Father'—
I rather think she's gone down there to stay;
She can't be yelled up, if they try all day.
Wonder, if I should save her, 'twould be bold?
I've dove for pennies—s'pose I dive for gold?"
Then, throwing off his coat—what there was of it—
He plunged into the water, rose above it,
Plunged in again, and came once more to air,
Grasping a pretty golden tress of hair,
And soon strong arms were stretched to her from shore;
And soon she raised her eyes, and lived once more.

But Sam, poor boy, exhausted, choked, and beaten
With the prodigious dinner he had eaten,
Strangled and sank beneath the river's brim;
And no one seemed to care to dive for him.
And when at last he came out, with "a haul,"
The school had one dead pupil, after all.

Poor drenched, dead hero!—in his tattered dress,
Sam now was a society success.
They crowded round the poor boy as he lay,
And talked about him in a mournful way;

And from the teachers efforts did not lack
To resurrect and bring their scholar back;
But useless was their toil, do all they could,
Sam and his great soul had gone on for good.

Nothing too nice that could be done and said
For this poor fellow—now that he was dead.
His casket was the richest and the best;
He went to his own funeral nicely dressed!
They rigged him out in very pretty trim;
A long, first-class procession followed him,
That reached the farthest distance up and down
Of any often witnessed in that town;
And all the children, shedding tears half hid,
Threw evergreens upon Sam's coffin-lid.

You youngsters tempted scornfully to smile,
If a poor boy doesn't come up to your style,
Or shrink from him as though perhaps he'll bite you,
Because he has some points that don't delight you,
Or think, because your "set" can do without him,
There's nothing that's desirable about him,
Just recollect that squeamishness is sham,
And drop a kind thought on brave Picnic Sam.

ONE AND TWO

If you to me be cold,
  Or I be false to you,
The world will go on, I think,
  Just as it used to do;
The clouds will flirt with the moon.
  The sun will kiss the sea,
The wind to the trees will whisper,
  And laugh at you and me;
But the sun will not shine so bright,
The clouds will not seem so white,
  To one, as they will to two;
So I think you had better be kind,
  And I had best be true,
And let the old love go on, go on,
  Just as it used to do.

If the whole of a page be read,
  If a book be finished through,
The world may read on, I think,
  Just as it used to do;
For other lovers will con
  The pages that we have passed,
And the treacherous gold of the binding
  Will glitter unto the last.

But lids have a lonely look,
And one may not read the book—
  It opens only to two:
So I think you had better be kind,
  And I had best be true,
And let the reading go on, go on,
  Just as it used to do.

If we who have sailed together
  Flit out of each other's view,
The world will sail on, I think,
  Just as it used to do;
And we may reckon by stars
  That flash from different skies,
And, sad to think, another
  May capture my lost prize;
But ships long time together
Can better the tempest weather
  Than any other two;
So I think you had better be kind,
  And I had best be true,
That we together may sail, may sail,
  Just as we used to do.

DEATH-DOOMED

THEY'RE taking me to the gallows, mother — they mean to hang me high;
They're going to gather round me there, and watch
me till I die;
All earthly joy has vanished now, and gone each mortal hope—
They'll draw a cap across my eyes, and round my neck
a rope;
The crazy mob will shout and groan—the priest will read a prayer,
The drop will fall beneath my feet and leave me in the air.
They think I murdered Allen Bayne; for so the Judge has said,
And they'll hang me to the gallows, mother—hang me till I'm dead!

The grass that grows in yonder meadow, the lambs
that skip and play,
The pebbled brook behind the orchard, that laughs
upon its way,
The flowers that bloom in the dear old garden, the birds that sing and fly,
Are clear and pure of human blood, and, mother, so am I!

By father's grave on yonder hill — his name without a stain—
I ne'er had malice in my heart, or murdered Allen Bayne!
But twelve good men have found me guilty, for so the Judge has said,
And they'll hang me to the gallows, mother—hang me till I'm dead.

The air is fresh and bracing, mother; the sun shines bright and high;
It is a pleasant day to live—a gloomy one to die!
It is a bright and glorious day the joys of earth to grasp—
It is a sad and wretched one to strangle, choke, and gasp!
But let them damp my lofty spirit, or cow me if they can!
They send me like a rogue to death—I'll meet it like a man.
For I never murdered Allen Bayne! but so the Judge has said,
And they'll hang me to the gallows, mother—hang me till I'm dead!

Poor little sister 'Bell will weep, and kiss me as I lie;
But kiss her twice and thrice for me, and tell her not to cry;
Tell her to weave a bright, gay garland, and crown me as of yore,
Then plant a lily upon my grave, and think of me no more.

And tell that maiden whose love I sought, that I was faithful yet;
But I must lie in a felon's grave, and she had best forget.
My memory is stained forever; for so the Judge has said,
And they'll hang me to the gallows, mother—hang me till I'm dead!

Lay me not down by my father's side; for once, I mind, he said
No child that stained his spotless name should share his mortal bed.
Old friends would look beyond his grave, to my dishonored one,
And hide the virtues of the sire behind the recreant son.
And I can fancy, if there my corse its fettered limbs should lay,
His frowning skull and crumbling bones would shrink from me away;
But I swear to God I'm innocent, and never blood have shed!
And they'll hang me to the gallows, mother—hang me till I'm dead!

Lay me in my coffin, mother, as you've sometimes seen me rest:
One of my arms beneath my head, the other on my breast.

Place my Bible upon my heart — nay, mother, do not weep—
And kiss me as in happier days you kissed me when asleep.
And for the rest—for form or rite—but little do I reck;
But cover up that curséd stain—the black mark on my neck!
And pray to God for his great mercy on my devoted head;
For they'll hang me to the gallows, mother—hang me till I'm dead!

* * * * * * *

But hark! I hear a mighty murmur among the jostling crowd!
A cry!—a shout!—a roar of voices!—it echoes long and loud!
There dashes a horseman with foaming steed and tightly gathered rein!
He sits erect!—he waves his hand!—good Heaven! 'tis Allen Bayne!
The lost is found, the dead alive, my safety is achieved!
For he waves his hand again, and shouts, "The prisoner is reprieved!"
Now, mother, praise the God you love, and raise your drooping head;
For the murderous gallows, black and grim, is cheated of its dead!

UP THE LINE

THROUGH blinding storm and clouds of night
We swiftly pushed our restless flight;
With thundering hoof and warning neigh,
We urged our steed upon his way
Up the line.

Afar the lofty head-light gleamed;
Afar the whistle shrieked and screamed;
And glistening bright, and rising high,
Our flakes of fire bestrewed the sky,
Up the line.

Adown the long, complaining track,
Our wheels a message hurried back;
And quivering through the rails ahead,
Went news of our resistless tread,
Up the line.

The trees gave back our din and shout,
And flung their shadow-arms about;
And shivering in their coats of gray,
They heard us roaring far away,
Up the line.

The wailing storm came on apace,
And dashed its tears into our face;
But steadily still we pierced it through,
And cut the sweeping wind in two,
Up the line.

A rattling rush across the ridge,
A thunder-peal beneath the bridge;
And valley and hill and sober plain
Re-echoed our triumphant strain,
Up the line.

And when the eastern streaks of gray
Bespoke the dawn of coming day,
We halted our steed, his journey o'er,
And urged his giant form no more,
Up the line.

FORWARD!

THE beast that counts a heart can feel it beat—
  The man who counts a soul can feel it yearn;
The while it guides his willing, eager feet,
  Where Triumph calls, and Victory's altars burn.
  The while it prompts his head and hands to earn
That which shall place him at the front: the when Humanity his merits shall discern,
And give to him a place of honor; then
Acknowledging a man among his fellow-men!

The Fates decreed us, at the birth of Time,
  The Fates decree, and hold the fiat still,
That they who cannot or who will not climb,
  Be trampled down by them who can and will.
  Philanthropists may take the doctrine ill,
And nobly lift their suffering fellows high;
  And he who strives to clamber up the hill,
Though weak, has help, for God helps them that try;
But he who will not strive had best lie down and die!

For hammer, axe, and spade will vex his ears,
  And spindles whirl about his idle head;
The steamer's shriek will rouse his feeble fears,
  The railroad-train will shake him in his bed!
  The nets of cliques and clans will round him spread;

And Time—a chariot to the man who strives—
  Will be a funeral car, and he its dead,
Till he unto his charnel-home arrives.
A million men have lived good corses all their lives!

A tiny floweret blossoms underfoot,
  And turns its dainty petals to the sky;
Draws life from earth and air, through leaf and root,
  While yet Destruction broods and lingers nigh.
  But naught that seems inaction we descry,
Though summer wanes, and autumn winds are cold;
  When effort fails, the plant is fain to die;
Its energies and days at once are told;
And soon it hangs its head and crumbles to the mould.

A rainbow arches on the clouded sky,
  But ne'er for long its colors flash and play;
A comet shines upon the gazing eye,
  But still is speeding on its endless way.
  Sun, moon, and stars—not one of them may stay;
For not an orb—howe'er it seem to stand—
  But marches grandly on by night and day,
Nor cares nor dares to halt, without command
Of Him, the mighty Chief, by whom the route was planned.

There is not that in earth, or air, or space,
  There is not that in heart, or mind, or soul
(Save in one sacred and mysterious Place),
  But hurries forward to some future goal,
  Or wanders back to an inglorious whole,

Wherefrom it sprung—whereto it turns to die;
And He who keeps all motion in control—
Whom change and dissolution come not nigh—
The same for evermore—is the great God on high.

Man loves to clamber on the steeps of fame,
Then rest awhile his wearied limbs; and yet
Each day some fellow-man must learn his name,
To stand for one who may that name forget;
Each hour some new requirement must be met;
Each changing year his altitude must grow;
Or, twined about with Comfort's gaudy net,
His indolence may plot his overthrow,
And he may plunge into the deep, dead gulf below.

Yet many a knight who mingles in the broil
Falls, ere his sun has reached its highest place:
Death strikes the strongest reaper in his toil,
And stops the swiftest runner of the race.
But time is short, and death is no disgrace,
But rather, to the faithful man, a friend;
And leaves a glory on the marble face
Of him who holds out faithful to the end—
Whose ways are brave and true—so far as they extend.

Then forward, men and women! let the bell
Of progress echo through each wakened mind!
Let the grand chorus through our numbers swell—
Who will not hasten shall be left behind!
Who conquers, shall a crown of glory find;

Who falls, if faithful, shall but fall to rise
Free from the tear-drenched clay that clogs mankind,
To where new triumphs greet his eager eyes;
FORWARD will ever be the watchword of the skies!

THE SHIP-BUILDER

Across the foaming, word-lashed sea of thought,
  Where heavy craft were struggling with the storm,
The winds, one day, an unknown vessel brought,
  Of flaunting streamer and fantastic form.
Old captains shook their grizzled heads in doubt,
And vainly strove to make the stranger out;
And critic-gunners raised their ready hand,
To fire at what they could not understand.

But, crowding sail, she rode the dangerous waves,
  Swept past old wrecks and signals of distress,
And o'er forgotten hulks and nameless graves,
  Straight glided to the harbor of Success!
The weary world looked for a little while—
It's care-worn face grew brighter, with a smile;
Until its voice caught rapture from its gaze,
And swelled into a thunder-peal of praise!

The outstripp'd jester, smiling, dropped his pun;
  The sage looked up, with pleased, instructed eyes;
The critic raised his double-shotted gun,
  And jubilantly fired it at the skies!

The laboring throng, when their day's toil was o'er,
Crowded along this unaccustomed shore,
And viewed with wonder and delight oft told,
The varied treasures of her deck and hold.

For there, arrayed in quaint and genial pride,
Stood Pickwick, captain of the motley crew;
The sturdy Samuel Weller by his side,
And many a passenger the people knew;
And, stored among this cargo of new mirth,
Flashed forth the brightest diamonds of earth;
Treasures of Nature's undissembled arts;
And stores of food for hungry, yearning hearts.

And ever as they gazed, and rushed to gaze,
Came sweeping o'er the sea another gale,
And gleamed upon their glad eyes, through the haze,
The welcome whiteness of another sail!
Rich loaded was one bark, and fair to see,
But aimed great guns at petty tyranny;
And as she swiftly glided safe to land,
Young Captain Nickleby was in command.

There came a ship of stranger seeming still,
With "Curiosities" in plenty stored;
And thousands crowded 'round her, with one will,
To view the passengers she had on board.
And one there was—her name was "Little Nell"—
The people much admired, and loved full well;
And many wept, and lingered at her side,
When, wearily, she laid her down and died.

So one by one to port the vessels came,
  Laden with comforts for both rich and poor,
But hurling bolts of scorn-envenomed flame
  At tyrant, rogue, and snob, and titled boor.
And each new ship the multitude flocked 'round,
Rejoicing o'er the treasures that they found;
And as each new sail flashing came to sight,
Broke forth a thousand plaudits of delight!

And so the millions, eager to confess
  The pleasures they from his creations drew,
Hastened to praise, and glorify, and bless
  The toiling man whose face they hardly knew,
Who, in his lonely room, worked for his goal,
With busy brain, and tender, yearning soul;
And with his good pen built and rigged and manned
The noble argosies his genius planned.

But one bright day the news gloomed o'er the earth
  That he, belovéd guest of many lands,
Had gone where first his clear-eyed soul had birth,
  Led by the pressure of down-reaching hands.
No monarch resting on his crape-strown bed
Had e'er such tears of sorrow o'er him shed,
As this untitled king of grief and mirth,
Whose subjects mourned in every clime of earth!

O master of the heart! if in yon land
  Thou canst but wander through its streets and vales,
And then before the countless millions stand
  And tell thy merry and pathetic tales,

If thou canst yet thy daily toil prolong,
Plead for the right, and battle with the wrong,
The happiness of heaven will o'er thee spread,
For thou thy path heaven-given still wilt tread!

HOW WE KEPT THE DAY

I

THE great procession came up the street,
With clatter of hoofs and tramp of feet;
There was General Jones to guide the van,
And Corporal Jinks, his right-hand man;
And each was riding on his high horse,
And each had epaulettes, of course;
And each had a sash of the bloodiest red,
And each had a shako on his head;
And each had a sword by his left side,
And each had his mustache newly dyed;
And that was the way
We kept the day,
The great, the grand, the glorious day,
That gave us—
Hurray! Hurray! Hurray!
(With a battle or two, the histories say,)
Our National Independence!

II

The great procession came up the street,
With loud da capo, and brazen repeat;
There was Hans, the leader, a Teuton born,
A sharp who worried the E flat horn;
And Baritone Jake, and Alto Mike,
Who never played anything twice alike;
And Tenor Tom, of conservative mind,
Who always came out a note behind;
And Dick, whose tuba was seldom dumb,
And Bob, who punished the big bass drum.
And when they stopped a minute to rest,
The martial band discoursed its best;
The ponderous drum and the pointed fife
Proceeded to roll and shriek for life;
And Bonaparte Crossed the Rhine, anon,
And The Girl I Left Behind Me came on;
And that was the way
The bands did play
On the loud, high-toned, harmonious day,
That gave us—
Hurray! Hurray! Hurray!
(With some music of bullets, our sires would say,)
Our glorious Independence!

III

The great procession came up the street,
With a wagon of virgins, sour and sweet;
Each bearing the bloom of recent date,
Each misrepresenting a single State.

There was California, pious and prim,
And Louisiana, humming a hymn;
The Texas lass was the smallest one—
Rhode Island weighed the tenth of a ton;
The Empire State was pure as a pearl,
And Massachusetts a modest girl!
Vermont was red as the blush of a rose—
And the goddess sported a turn-up nose,
And looked, free sylph, where she painfully sat,
The worlds she wouldn't give to remain in that.
And in this way
The maidens gay
Flashed up the street on the beautiful day,
That gave us—
Hurray! Hurray! Hurray!
(With some sacrifices, our mothers would say,)
Our glorious Independence!

IV

The great procession came up the street,
With firemen uniformed flashily neat;
There was Tubbs, the foreman, with a voice like five,
The happiest, proudest man alive;
With a trumpet half as long as a gun,
Which he used for the glory of "Number 1";
There was Nubbs, who had climbed a ladder high,
And saved a dog that was left to die;
There was Cubbs, who had dressed in black and blue
The eye of the foreman of Number 2.

And each marched on with steady stride,
And each had a look of fiery pride;
And each glanced slyly round, with a whim
That all of the girls were looking at him;
And that was the way,
With grand display,
They marched through the blaze of the glowing day,
That gave us—
Hurray! Hurray! Hurray!
(With some hot fighting, our fathers would say,)
Our glorious Independence!

V

The eager orator took the stand
In the cause of our great and happy land;
He aired his own political views,
He told us all of the latest news:
How the Boston folks one night took tea—
Their grounds for steeping it in the sea;
What a lot of Britons our fathers did kill,
On the glorious day of Bunker Hill;
He put us all in anxious doubt
As to how that matter was coming out;
And when at last he had fought us through
To the bloodless year of '82,
'Twas the fervent hope of every one
That he, as well as the war, was done.
But he continued to painfully soar
For something less than a century more;

Until at last he had fairly begun
The wars of eighteen-sixty-one;
And never rested till 'neath the tree
That shadowed the glory of Robert Lee.
And then he inquired, with martial frown,
"Americans, must we go down?"
And as if an answer from Heaven were sent,
The stand gave way and down he went.
A singer or two beneath him did drop—
A big fat alderman fell atop;
And that was the way
Our orator lay,
Till we fished him out, on the eloquent day
That gave us—
Hurray! Hurray! Hurray!
(With a clash of arms, Pat. Henry would say,)
Our wordy Independence!

VI

The marshal his hungry compatriots led,
Where Freedom's tables were thickly spread,
With all that man or woman could eat,
From crisp to sticky—from sour to sweet.
There were chickens that scarce had learned to crow,
And veteran roosters of long ago;
There was one old turkey, huge and fierce,
That was hatched in the days of President Pierce:
Of which, at last, with an ominous groan,
The parson essayed to swallow a bone;

And it took three sinners, plucky and stout,
To grapple the evil and bring it out.
And still the dinner went merrily on,
And James and Lucy and Hannah and John
Kept winking their eyes and smacking their lips,
And passing the eatables into eclipse.
And that was the way
The grand array
Of victuals vanished on that day,
That gave us—
Hurray! Hurray! Hurray!
(With some starvation, the records say,)
Our well-fed Independence!

VII

The people went home through the sultry night,
In a murky mood and a pitiful plight;
Not more had the rockets' sticks gone down,
Than the spirits of them who had "been to town";
Not more did the fire-balloon collapse,
Than the pride of them who had known mishaps.
There were feathers ruffled, and tempers roiled,
And several brand-new dresses spoiled;
There were hearts that ached from envy's thorns,
And feet that twinged with trampled corns;
There were joys proved empty, through and through,
And several purses empty, too;
And some reeled homeward, muddled and late,
Who hadn't taken their glory straight;

And some were fated to lodge, that night,
In the city lock-up, snug and tight;
And that was the way
There was mischief to pay,
As there frequently is, at the close of the day,
That gave us—
Hurray! Hurray! Hurray!
(With some restrictions, the fault-finders say,)
That which, please God, we will keep for aye—
Our glorious Independence!

OUR ARMY OF THE DEAD

By the edge of the Atlantic, where the waves of Freedom roar,
And the breezes of the ocean chant a requiem to the shore,
On the Nation's Eastern hill-tops, where its cornerstone is laid,
On the mountains of New England, where our fathers toiled and prayed, Mid old Keystone's rugged riches, which the miner's hand await,
Mid the never-ceasing commerce of the busy Empire State,
With the country's love and honor on each brave, devoted head,
Is a band of noble heroes—is our Army of the Dead.

On the lake-encircled homestead of the thriving Wolverine,
On the beauteous Western prairies, with their carpeting of green,
By the sweeping Mississippi, long our country's pride and boast,
On the rugged Rocky Mountains, and the rich Pacific coast,

In the listless, sunny Southland, with its blossoms and its vines,
On the bracing Northern hill-tops, and amid their murmuring pines,
Over all our happy country—over all our Nation spread,
Is a band of noble heroes—is our Army of the Dead.

Not with musket, and with sabre, and with glad heart beating fast;
Not with cannon that had thundered till the bloody war was past;
Not with voices that are shouting with the vim of victory's note;
Not with armor gayly glistening, and with flags that proudly float;
Not with air of martial vigor, nor with steady, soldier tramp,
Come they grandly marching to us — for the boys are all in camp.
With forgetfulness upon it—each within his earthy bed,
Waiting for his marching orders—is our Army of the Dead.

Fast asleep the boys are lying, in their low and narrow tents,
And no battle-cry can wake them, and no orders call them hence;
And the yearnings of the mother, and the anguish of the wife,
Cannot with their magic presence call the soldier back to life;

And the brother's manly sorrow, and the father's mournful pride,
Cannot give back to his country him who for his country died.
They who for the trembling Nation in its hour of trial bled,
Lie, in these its years of triumph, with our Army of the Dead.

When the years of Earth are over, and the cares of Earth are done,
When the reign of Time is ended, and Eternity begun,
When the thunders of Omniscience on our wakened
senses roll,
And the sky above shall wither, and be gathered like a scroll;
When, among the lofty mountains, and across the mighty sea,
The sublime celestial bugler shall ring out the reveille,
Then shall march with brightest laurels, and with proud, victorious tread,
To their station up in heaven, our Grand Army of the Dead.

"MENDING THE OLD FLAG"

In the silent gloom of a garret room,
With cobwebs round it creeping,
From day to day the old Flag lay—
A veteran worn and sleeping.
Dingily old, each wrinkled fold
By the dust of years was shaded;
Wounds of the storm were upon its form;
The crimson stripes were faded.

'Twas a mournful sight in the day-twilight,
This thing of humble seeming,
That once so proud o'er the cheering crowd
Had carried its colors gleaming:
Stained with mould were the braids of gold,
That had flashed at the sun-ray's kissing;
Of faded hue was its field of blue,
And some of the stars were missing.

Three Northern maids and three from glades
Where dreams the Southland weather,
With glances kind and arms entwined,
Came up the stair together:

"THEY MENDED AWAY THROUGH THE SUMMER DAY"

They gazed awhile, with a thoughtful smile,
  At the crouching form before them;
With clinging holds they grasped its folds,
  And out of the darkness bore them.

They healed its scars, they found its stars,
  And brought them all together
(Three Northern maids and three from glades
  Where smiles the Southland weather);
They mended away through the summer day,
  Made glad by an inspiration
To fling it high at the smiling sky,
  On the birthday of our nation.

In the brilliant glare of the summer air,
  With a brisk breeze round it creeping,
Newly bright through the glistening light,
  The flag went grandly sweeping:
Gleaming and bold were its braids of gold,
  And flashed in the sun-ray's kissing;
Red, white, and blue were of deepest hue,
  And none of the stars was missing.
